Valuation Day, the day that the national revenue department will use for your 1972 income tax calculations, has been declared as Wednesday, Dec. 23, 1971. The valuation date for bonds and other assets is set at Dec. 31, 1971. Capital gains or losses in shares held by Canadians will be calculated from that date. The Daily Colonist, through its Canadian Press stock wire services, today is providing readers with a complete list of stocks on Canadian exchanges for Dec 23 and the prices of them accepted by the revenue department. The list covers Pages 8 and 9.

Five-page letter listing bomb locations included safety-deposit box key

Bank Bombs Shake Police

Cleverly-fashioned time bombs were removed safely Friday from banks in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, where they were planted months ago in an ominous demonstration of a plot to free "all political prisoners."

At least one of the devices was planted in each of the three great United States financial centres—Wall Street in New York, LaSalle Street in Chicago and Montgomery Street in San Francisco.

Planted Six Months Ago

Eight explosive devices in as many banks were found and disarmed upon directions of the bomber or bombers, who sent anonymous letters listing their locations. The letters said the bombs were planted in safe-deposit boxes six months ago.

A ninth bomb in San Francisco's Bank of America apparently exploded prematurely last September, causing only minor damage.

For nearly 10 hours after the handwritten, special delivery warning letters were received during the night in Chicago and San Francisco, tension mounted among authorities from coast to coast as they sweated out removal of the bombs.

In all three cities, it was necessary to wait until well after dawn Friday for time locks to expire and open the banks' massive vault doors.

In four cases, the letter writer mailed keys to the safe-deposit boxes where the bombs were deposited. In the others, specialists had to drill open the boxes, since the bank's key would not work alone in the absence of the depositor's key.

"I've never seen anything

Okinawa Return Speeded By Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon has agreed in summit talks with Premier Eisaku Sato of Japan to return Okinawa to Japanese control May 15, about six weeks earlier than the United States wanted.

The two leaders also reported substantial progress towards improving economic ties strained by Japanese trade barriers. And they agreed to establish a "hot line" between Washington and Tokyo to improve high-level communications between the two major Pacific powers.

U.S. officials had pressed for major concessions in lowering trade barriers and other restrictions which have led to a $3-billion annual deficit in U.S. trade with Japan.

Sources said these concessions were the price for an early return of the non-populous Second World War island of Okinawa to Japanese control.

As he had foreseen to the Japanese premier, Nixon said the "far-ranging and very comprehensive discussions" disclosed "a natural interdependence between Japan and the United States."

During a news conference, Sato acknowledged he had not asked Nixon to visit Japan because of the fear of demonstration against the American leader.

He also told reporters:

● Japan will not intervene to defend the security of Taiwan or South Korea but the United States will be able to do so from Japanese bases, on the condition that it sends its forces to trouble spots indirectly.

● Though U.S. bases will remain on Okinawa, the U.S. has been asked to reduce its facilities there as much as possible.

● Not only nuclear weapons, but also chemical and biological weapons will be removed from Okinawa.

'Only Bennett Can Do It'

Gas Bidders Demand Clear Rules

VANCOUVER (CP)—The presidents of two companies competing for approval to build a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island from the mainland want clarification—and soon—of the rules affecting the competition.

Ron Rutherford, president of Pacific Northern Gas, says he can't see how the applicants could go ahead if the clarification isn't made by Jan. 15, date of the next meeting between applicants and the Public Utilities Commission.

Their statements followed word from Gordon Shrum, chairman of B.C. Hydro, that Hydro could build a pipeline to the island without PUC approval and would — if it chooses — have distribution rights on the island for gas from any pipeline.

Meantime, Resources Minister Ray Williston, also a Hydro director, said Thursday the position is that Hydro will distribute in Greater Victoria and also in economically-feasible areas the successful pipeline company does not wish to serve itself.

The two pipeline presidents said there are many important differences between the two statements.

Bailey said Shrum's statement on distribution, combined with statements made by him earlier to the commission, means that, not only have the rules for building the pipeline been changed, but

Leak in High Places Not So Bad After All

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Mrs. William Rogers, wife of the secretary of state, said at a recent luncheon that her husband is briefed by an aide every morning on events that transpired around the world during the night.

Her husband once urged his aide to report some good news for a change. "There's no good news, sir, but there's some bad news that's not our fault," the aide said. "The Aswan Dam is leaking."

Mujib Returns To Bangladesh

Sheikh Mujib ... in Dacca

NEW DELHI (AP)—Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has been released and has flown to Dacca, capital of Bangladesh, Pakistan radio announced today. President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto saw the sheikh off at the airport when the Bengali leader returned to his home, the station said.

The plane left early this morning Pakistan time, it said.

In a Bengali broadcast heard here, the radio quoted an official Pakistani spokesman as saying Bhutto did not want to impose his will on the sheikh since Mujib is the leader of "East Pakistan."

The radio did not say whether Bhutto and Mujib held a final round of talks before the sheikh left.

Home Stolen

CAMPBELL RIVER — Someone has made off with James McCoy's home and so far Campbell River RCMP have drawn a blank. The home is actually a house boat and McCoy of 740 Evergreen reported it missing from West Thurlow Island — this week where it had been moored on boats in the water.

Spanish Jet Crash Kills 104

IBIZA, Balearic Islands (AP) — A Spanish airliner coming down through fog for a landing smashed into a 1,000-foot peak on this Spanish Mediterranean island Friday. Officials said all 104 aboard the twin-jet Caravelle died.

Rescue squads found debris and bodies scattered over a wide area but no survivors shortly after the Iberia Airlines plane dropped out of the clouds and slammed into the mountain.

Most of the passengers were Spaniards. Many were travelling to the resort island from the southern city of Valencia.

A spokesman for the airline said two men — Jeff Desk of New York City and a Mr. Fricker from West Germany — were believed to be the only foreigners among the 98 passengers and six crew members.

The crash was the worst in Iberia's history but not the worst in Spain. Eighteen months ago a British Dan-Air charter jet crashed near Barcelona killing 105 persons.

Iberia's worst previous crash was March 31, 1965, when one of its planes crashed off Tangier with a loss of 30 lives.

The Iberia flight was en route from Madrid to Ibiza, a favorite summer place for hippies, with a stop in Valencia.

The plane crashed about five miles from the Ibiza airport, one of the busiest in Spain during the peak of the summer holiday season.

Cholera Threat

GENEVA (UPI) — Europe can expect a further invasion of cholera this year, the World Health Organization said Friday.

Last year there were cases in Algeria, Morocco, Portugal and Spain and isolated cases in France, West Germany, Sweden and Britain. Altogether, 40 countries reported 155,000 cases and 75,000 deaths.

Husband Dies of Cold, Wife Feeds Baby Snow

RAWLINS, Wyo. (UPI) — A Rawlins woman stranded four days in a blizzard Friday said she burned floor mats to keep warm and melted snow to feed her 18-month-old baby while waiting rescue by persons she thought her husband would find.

The husband, Johnny Montano, 25, had frozen to death about eight miles from where he left his family in the temperature that ranged from 37 to 50 degrees below zero.

A search party Thursday found Mrs. Consuelo Montano and her daughter Melissa conscious but suffering from frostbite and exposure. A short time later they found Montano's body.

The incident occurred about 37 miles southwest of Rawlins.

"They had gone out rabbit hunting New Year's Day and the truck got stuck," said a spokesman for the Carbon County sheriff's office. "He (Montano) left about midnight Sunday to get aid for his wife and child. He made it about six miles and lit a fire and we found him about two miles from there."

"He was just a half-mile from a railroad section house that had people living in it who could have helped him,"

Montano had set out dressed only in jeans, shirt, boots and jacket.

"He had a child's hat wrapped around his face, for warmth," said the spokesman. Officials said Mrs. Montano burned floor mats and anything else she could find to keep warm after using up all of the truck's gas to keep the heater running.

Charles Martinez, her brother, said when he and his companions first found the truck, Mrs. Montano was partially delirious from the cold and lack of food.

"She said the baby kept crying for daddy and food and so she would go out and get snow and feed that to her," he explained. He added Mrs. Montano felt her husband was dead even before being told his body had been found.

Compensation Fees Next Target

Doctors Say Updating Badly Needed

By JOHN MATTERS

An official of the B.C. Medical Association said Friday that once the current dispute with the provincial government is settled doctors will review their Workmen's Compensation Board fees.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the BCMA, said the schedule of fees under which doctors bill the Workmen's Compensation Board is badly in need of updating.

"We will get to that as soon as the present situation is cleared up," he added.

The fee schedule that applies to the WCB is similar to that which doctors use for their medicare billings.

Last year, B.C.'s doctors collected $2.7 million from the compensation board. By way of comparison, their total gross medicare earnings were $28.1 million.

The $2.7 million that the compensation board paid out to doctors was among the $8.8 million that the WCB spent on medical services to injured workers.

Of that total, B.C. Hospital

Insurance Service, the government agency responsible for hospitals, got about $4 million.

All of WCB's costs are assessed to employers.

The B.C. Medical Association is awaiting word from the provincial government as to whether it will satisfy medicine billings made under a schedule of minimum fees that went into effect Jan. 1.

The only offer made by the government has been a 10 per cent "global" increase in the cost of medicare. This would include all the factors contributing to medicare's total costs. The portion that would go to fee increases would depend on the control of utilization, new services and so on.

Non-Prescription 'Cures'

THE AFFLICTION might not be quite so great in Canada as the United States, but there is no doubt that some wrong impressions are given and held regarding many non-prescription drugs — or at least compounds that crowd the shelves of drug stores and are commonly referred to as drugs. These so-called cures and relief-givers for various ailments are forced down throats, as it were, through saturation television advertising which is beamed at Canadian aches and pains as much as American, in that the same "remedies" are available in both countries.

Canada stands to benefit, then, from an announcement made in Washington the other day of a "sweeping review" of non-prescription drugs which could result in the banning of some of them, modification for others, and the curbing of "indefensible" advertising for even those that win approval.

The action results, apparently, from a study by the National Academy of Sciences of 420 products sold in drug stores which found that only one-fourth of them were any good. Most of the "remedies," in the words of the commissioner of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, "do not have the claimed effect, have inadequate instructions for effective use by the consumer, or are promoted in deceptive and indefensible ways."

Even some of those with merit are being pushed deceptively, the commissioner said, and the review will help resolve "the frustrations of a public besieged with claims and counter-claims, with testimonials and with doubtful assertions of comparability."

There are 26 categories of "over the counter" products that are being looked at, and with one of them, vitamin-minerals, there has been considerable action already. Whether or not there will be further delving into the Vitamin C and E crazes remains to be seen. It would be good to have that cleared up.

The ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) thing is still in a bewildering state. From high scientific places there are great claims for it as a killer of the common cold which have been refuted from equally reputable sources. The same can be said about "E" and, for that matter, "A" and "D" which are offered by the counter in any corner drug store — the multiple vitamins, the mineral-fortified, the high-potency therapeutics, the geriatrics, the feminine supplements, the prenatal, and so on.

But even if there isn't an all-out assault on the vitamin pillboxes, there is plenty of room for skimming in the other 25 fields of non-prescription drugs, where advances can be made for the consumer.

And there is a possible bit of strategy that Canada might defend against — the dumping here of the duds that are found in the United States drug store arsenal.

Bicycles on Sidewalks

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S Motor Vehicle Act prohibits riding bicycles on sidewalks. It also prohibits riding bicycles in the roadway if there is a useable path intended for the use of bicycles adjacent to the roadway. Thus one way of keeping cyclists out of the flow of motor traffic is ruled out, and another, preferable and approved, is generally unavailable. Even today, with bicycle popularity growing without precedent, municipal and provincial planners seem reluctant to recommend bicycle paths as an adjunct to road improvement — perhaps with good financial reason.

But in some places, and in modern circumstances, bicycles could surely be ridden with more safety on sidewalks than in the roadways. Not where the sidewalks are heavily used by pedestrians, certainly. But Victoria for instance has several thoroughfares on which, out of the centre of town, wide walks accommodate only the occasional walker, contrary to the expectations of another era.

The District of Columbia, which U.S. Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe wants to see become a "model city for bicycles," has set what may be a precedent for North American cities: it now permits cyclists to use the sidewalks in most areas, providing they yield the right of way to pedestrians.

For safety's sake, and for the sake of cost, too, a removal of the ban in designated areas might well be considered here.

Council Continuity

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS MINISTER Dan Campbell says he has no objection to biennial instead of annual municipal elections, but would like a closer approach to unanimity in favor of the change among B.C. municipalities before taking any action. He's safe.

The latest suggestion of biennial elections came from Burnaby's Mayor Bob Pittie, who said annual elections were a waste of money and did not allow for a whole city council to be thrown out if voters wanted one that was new and different. The present system is to elect half the aldermen every year, the mayor every two years.

A virtue of this method is that there are always some aldermen familiar with what has been going on. At any rate, this is the argument that forever will be advanced by councils nervous about being bounced out en masse, and into two years of being off the stage.

But perhaps it's a pity. A biennial election at which this could happen would almost certainly attract more voter interest. And more interest is what's needed.

Ottawa Offbeat

'Best Mail Service in the World'

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

SO now we have the new, higher, eight-cent first-class postal rate and a mail non-service which Postmaster General Jean Pierre Côté admits "has to be sold" to an increasingly skeptical public.

He was defending the rate increase and the non-quality of the service the other day in a tough go-round with newspaper, radio and television reporters.

Carefully side-stepping the real cause of the increase — the strike militancy of the postal workers — he tried to kill his questioners that Canada's is "the best mail service in the world."

His joke got a loud laugh. Where else in the world, he was asked amid guffaws, were the taxpayers so resigned to over-priced under-service that the post office could get away with a three-day-week mail delivery.

"Only happens a couple of times a year," he parried, "like in the Christmas holidays."

For whose benefit is the mail service run, he was asked, the postal workers or the taxpayers?

"Aw, stop it," he pleaded, "don't you know I've got to sell it to the public?"

What he had forgotten as he spouted his well-meant nonsense about "the best mail service in the world," and bravely avoided, as best he could, putting the finger on the postal workers, was that the post office itself had blown the whistle on its staff.

In its yearly report the department laid it on the line.

Four months of the postal workers' "rotating strikes," which parliamentarians had branded as "blackmail of the taxpayers," had cost those same taxpayers $35 million.

Add to the cost, too, the price of increasing first class mail rates from six to seven, and now to eight cents.

Put on the cost tab, too, the pay increases the postal workers had blackjacked out of government that routinely takes the soft and easy line when dealing with civil servants.

So soft and easy, such diverse parliamentarians as New Democratic MP Max Saltzman of Waterloo and Creditiste Leader René Robitaille have said, that the federal government payroll has a far higher "fat" content than average wage and salary rates in private business and industry.

"The rotating strikes," disclosed the post office report, "had a lasting effect. Many of our users were forced to find alternative distribution and delivery services and have continued employing them."

It wasn't a case of loving the uncertain, unreliable, on-and-off-again post office service less, but of liking those dependable and presumably not more costly, alternative delivery facilities better.

So the post office did less business last year and charged more to do it. The department's own figures show the mail volume fell by three million pieces. Revenue dropped by $8 million.

Staff increased — with more men needed, apparently, to sort and deliver less mail.

Costs climbed by nearly $34 million. And the post office deficit soared $45 million, hitting a new $101 million high.

Of that $101 million loss, $35 million was charged to those rotating strikes.

As to increased costs, the post office again pointed the finger at the postal workers, putting, as it was phrased, "particular" blame on them for strike-induced wage inflation.

"Best mail service in the world," says Postmaster General Côté with hollow conviction, making it sound like the bad joke it is.

And at the new and higher eight-cent rate, too.

There's a Bit of a Thaw

But Moscow's Still Wary

By NEAL ASCHERSON from London

QUIETLY and even rather unexpectedly, the Soviet ambassador has returned to London after an absence of four months. Mikhail Smirnovsky was already on leave in the Soviet Union when, last September, the British took the remarkable step of expelling no less than 105 Soviet diplomats on allegations of espionage, but his failure to return to Britain at the end of his holidays was a clear sign of Russian displeasure.

Does his return mean that Anglo-Soviet relations are now improving, and that enormous damage registered by Russia over the expulsions is dissipating itself at last? One current theory suggests that his appearance has to do with the new crisis over Malta, to which Mr. Smirnovsky is also accredited, and has no significance for any "improvement" in the climate between London and Moscow. Be that as it may, there are some superficial signs that contacts between Britain and the Soviet Union are beginning to come back to normal.

A Russian is playing in the chess tournament at Hastings, a British breeder has sent 16,000 rabbits to Moscow where they will multiply to the benefit of Soviet stewpots. Mr. Kosygin has offered to provide large quantities of cotton from Soviet Asia to keep the ailing mills of Lancashire turning. Exchanges of orchestras and circuses and other cultural commodities are starting up again. In the Soviet embassy in London, where the survivors of purge are working overtime to perform the jobs of their expelled colleagues, a few extra staff men have been permitted to arrive. Replacements for diplomats whose turn in London has ended have received their British visas after abnormally long waits.

But these improvements are small stuff. Relations remain basically bad. The Russians are still incredulous about the expulsions, certainly the unleashing of a bull in the fragile china-shop of diplomacy, and seek for profound policy explanations. One reason which played a part was in fact the exasperation of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the foreign secretary and a gentleman of the older, tougher vintage, at getting no answer from Mr. Gromyko, his Soviet counterpart, to his letters about going-on in the Soviet embassy. He decided that this silence was deeply rude, took offence, and threw all the offenders out at once.

This is not the sort of explanation which cuts much ice with the Russians. Their attitude remains that it is up to the British to repair the mess.

The British press continues to produce more scary exposures of Russian spies in high places, without notably hard evidence, and the Soviet authorities consider these stories to be proof of a "concerted campaign" with official British backing.

It is a matter for pain in the foreign office that small rudenesses to Moscow which originate in British newspapers or through demonstrations by Jewish organizations in London seem to give vast offence, while things like the assault on Mr. Kosygin in Canada or the firing of rifle shots into the Soviet mission to the United Nations are taken relatively calmly. But it is the Soviet view that Britain is becoming the major obstacle to a security settlement in Europe. As a recent Soviet broadcast put it, "The Tories have again produced the bogey of a Soviet menace. They are trying to persuade their NATO allies not to improve relations with the Soviet Union... they do not conceal that they like to turn the Common Market into a military and political alliance... they will try to make it yet another instrument of their anti-Soviet policy."

While views like these are expressed, any talk of mending the fences between the two countries remains premature. The genuine core of the problem is that Britain has no Ostpolitik, no vision of a future Europe in which East and West might co-operate usefully. In this, Britain and the present Conservative government especially — can be contrasted to countries like West Germany, France or even Belgium and Norway, which all in various ways see direct benefit to themselves from an East-West settlement and closer contact with Eastern Europe.

It is untrue, although the Soviet press asserts it, that Britain is opposed to a European security conference. But it is true that Britain has no special enthusiasm for the project, and remains exceptionally suspicious of Soviet motives in pressing for it. If Mr. Smirnovsky can explain to the foreign office what his masters mean by "deeds," not "words", it might turn out that a stirring British declaration in favor of a conference with definite proposals for its agenda might clear away much of the diplomatic wreckage created in September.

Yellowhead Route

The Edmonton Journal

WINTER storms have blocked the Trans-Canada Highway in the Banff-Golden stretch as they will, from time to time, in the next few months block other areas of this cross-country route.

This is a statement of fact made without any intention of criticism. The delays were expected long ago; they tend to be short because great masses of road equipment are kept on hand to deal with the heavy snows which come to this route.

At the same time, however, the Yellowhead route has remained open and, on the record, will be open through the winter. As a reliable commercial highway its reputation is growing although its completion to reasonable standards is recent.

Occasionally we hear noises about twinning the Trans-Canada because of the heavy tourist traffic on it. For two months of the year it can be congested in what is admittedly some of Canada's finest scenic mountain country. It is also the highest cost road-building in Canada.

How much more sense it makes to suggest that the also scenic but more level and more economic Yellowhead route should receive priority in expenditures because of its growing importance as the commercial route in Western Canada.

Further thought should be given to the possibility of an alternate route to the coast than the Fraser Canyon stretch which, can be shut down by weather, is a traffic bottleneck often and represents high cost building.

Venice on the Mend

The Christian Science Monitor

AT last the Italian government is taking action to save Venice.

Its bill, already approved by the Senate and now to be acted on by the lower house, may fall short of what some conservationists, including UNESCO officials, think desirable. But it provides for a substantial salvage operation. The bill will authorize construction of sluice gates across two of the three channels linking the Venetian lagoon with the Adriatic. (Conservationists say a third sluice gate should cover the remaining channel.) The gates will control the level of water in the lagoon. The biggest threat to Venice has come from flooding and from settling of the mud at the bottom of the lagoon, so that the city has been slowly sinking into the sea.

Under the bill Venice will be given a proper sewage system (unbelievably this has never been done before), aqueducts will replace artesian wells (said to be largely responsible for the settling), and steps will be taken to check sea and air pollution which is slowly corroding the walls of the city's palaces and houses.

Chief criticism of the bill is that it does nothing to check the spreading industrialization of the mainland bordering on Venice.

But at least it contains a number of sound measures to stop the slow destruction of the city and preserve its architectural treasures. The Italian government has been woefully slow in acting. It had to be provoked by cries of alarm from many quarters. Now that it has moved, it is a case of better late than never.

The Common Market Has a Language Problem

By DAVID HAWORTH from Brussels

THE first thing you learn in this job is modesty. It helps if you know a little about company law, atomic physics and agriculture, but there are bound to be limits."

So says George MacGregor, head of the English translation department at the Common Market headquarters, who has been rushed off his feet for many months supervising the translation of the European Economic Community's colossal quantity of rules and regulations.

The EEC puts through an average of 2,000 regulations each year and every single one of which is still effective, some of almost unbelievable technical complexity, needs to be translated as an essential preparation for Europe's enlargement.

Mr. MacGregor, who has held his job almost since the Common Market's creation, admits that "the task is immensely more difficult than I would have imagined." He recalls, for instance, two research papers on African swine fever which he had to translate — and gazed with mock despair at the ceiling.

The translation of the Treaty of Rome caused the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London, for all its linguistic expertise, to draft it three times before it passed the scrutiny of Mr. MacGregor and his colleagues. Clearly a perfectionist, he comments: "I can still pick holes in it."

Avoiding linguistic discrepancies altogether is impossible. "There will always be some smart aleck who spots an error of ambiguity," says MacGregor, "but for the most part the translation has to be good enough to satisfy the purposes of lawyers, economists and politicians."

A linguistic mistake has not yet become an issue of major contention in any of the Common Market institutions. English texts of the Community treaties and EEC legislation have to be sharp and clear enough for approval by British Parliament. In the past, rules regulating the Common Agricultural Policy have been "interpreted" so flexibly by some farmers as to allow them to pull off complicated frauds which the Community has had to pay for.

Mistakes in sense and intention are lurking like sharks just beneath the plausible face-value of legislation which has to be translated. How do you turn the phrase "facilité de paiement" into English, or put "economic batch quantity" into French?

The commission's English translation section has just recruited two expert Irish linguists. Although Irish representatives here will use English and French as their working languages, for constitutional reasons any laws which have to be approved by Dublin must first be rendered into Irish. That is why, not to offend Irish susceptibilities, the phrase "treaties in English" has to be avoided, and only "treaties in the English language" may be employed.

"Thank goodness we don't have to translate the Treaty of Rome into Welsh," says MacGregor.

The Community's anxiety is whether it will be able to find enough linguists whose mother tongue is English to cope with the enormous demand when Britain officially joins the EEC. MacGregor has 26 people in his immediate team and has worked out with some precision that 160, including simultaneous interpreters, will soon be "the absolute minimum required." There is only one post-graduate school for translators in Britain — in Bath — and that turns out only six students a year.

English is making progress as a common language in the EEC — progress which will be accelerated by the presence of Ireland, Norway and Denmark, the other applicant countries. This is not a particularly happy prospect for the French-speaking nationalists who watch these things very closely. The first chairman of the European commission, Dr. Walter Hallstein, once said: "Frenchish is the vernacular of Europe — or perhaps it's Desperanto."

Two Die in Ohio River Blast

Fuel Barge Explodes

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (UPI) — A partially empty gasoline barge exploded near a railroad bridge over the Ohio River here Friday, killing two persons, injuring 11 others, seriously damaging the span and shattering

"every window in downtown Parkersburg." Two men aboard the barge were killed and three other crewmen were injured. The other injured were citizens hurt by flying glass and in traffic accidents in "acute anxiety reaction" to the blast, which sent shock waves through the downtown area. Officials said the explosion apparently was caused by electric sparks from a pump being used to remove about 52 excess gallons of gasoline from a fuel compartment aboard two barges, which were owned by the Martin Oil Co. of Blue Island, Ill.

An original shipment of 250,000 gallons of gasoline, consigned from Port Arthur, Tex., to the Atlantic Richfield Oil Co., was unloaded Thursday at Steubenville, Ohio, and the barges were en route to Baton Rouge, La.

The force of the explosion tore the flaming barges, each as long as a football field, from their tug, the "Martin," and sent them drifting into a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad bridge. The empty span then burst into flames.

The bridge fire was extinguished when firemen from neighboring Belpre, Ohio, loaded a portable pump on a locomotive 500 feet onto the bridge to fight the flames that gutted barges finally sank.

The explosion blew out every window in downtown Parkersburg," said a spokesman for the B and O Railroad. "Eleven truckloads of glass were ordered from Charleston to replace them."

A piece of one of the barges flew about 80 feet into the air and landed on the bridge's superstructure. A freight train had cleared the bridge only about two minutes before the 2:55 p.m. EST explosion.

Gov. Arch A. Moore, responding to a request by Mayor P. A. Nicely, ordered 30 to 40 local National Guardsmen to patrol downtown Parkersburg Friday night to prevent looting.

The dead crewmen were not immediately identified.

'Bookie's Bookie'

Gambling King Cohen Hobbles Out Free Man

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — Balding, brooding former west coast mobster Mickey Cohen, jailed for more than 10 years for income tax evasion, hobbled on a cane out of federal prison Friday. The first thing he did was eat a generous slice of chocolate pie.

"The hell with this rotten place," he told his brother Harry of Los Angeles, who picked up the former gang-land boss at the prison gates and whisked him away in a white Cadillac.

Cohen, once a dapper gambler who took burlesque queen Candy Barr as a girlfriend, and who liked to call himself the "bookie's bookie," looked older than a man of 58. He was set free 4½ years early for good behavior.

The stumpy ex-mobster, severely crippled by a jailhouse beating nine years ago, limped to freedom wearing a shrunken pair of brown prison pants that hung only to his shins.

"I wanted to throw the cane away and start running," said the pallid Cohen as he ate the chocolate pie at a local cafe. "It's good to be free, that's all."

Cohen said he had longed for the taste of the pie since he ate a slice during a brief period of freedom 18 months ago when he appeared in federal court for an unsuccessful appeal of his conviction. The cafe is across the street from the federal courthouse.

He left the U.S. medical center for federal prisoners two hours before noon and hobbled to the waiting car, driven by a man believed to be a physical therapist who will give Cohen daily treatments.

In the rear seat were his brother and his brother's wife, who were expected to accompany him on a vacation at a secret spot.

Harry Cohen said his brother's legal feud with the Bureau of Prisons, in which he won a court judgment of $110,000, would continue.

Cohen was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment for evading $392,000 in federal income taxes during the 1940s. He had been a patient in a medical center since 1963, when another prisoner at the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., beat him on the head with a lead pipe. Cohen's physical abilities remained impaired even after an operation which relieved pressure on his brain. He has undergone constant physical therapy since.

750,000 Petition Seal Hunt Ban

MONTREAL (CP) — A 750,000-named petition protesting the annual seal hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and off the coast of Newfoundland is on its way to Prime Minister Trudeau.

The petition, signed by persons from Canada, Holland, France, Switzerland, South Africa and the United States, will be matched by another 650,000-name petition to be presented to the Canadian High Commission in London.

Tour Overbooking Strands Canadians

LONDON (CP) — Lloyd International Airways said Friday it will refuse all further bookings from charter agencies on flights to Eastern Canada and the United States because it is not satisfied these organizations are conforming with government regulations.

This decision followed an overbooking incident Wednesday night in which 56 Canadians, returning to the Toronto area through Niagara Falls, N.Y., were stranded at Stated Airport north of London.

Most of them, with the exception of a few whose passports were found not in order, were given seats on a British Midlands plane which flew to

Killers Favored Rifles

OTTAWA (CP) — Firearms were used in 44 per cent of the 3,668 slayings in Canada in the 1961-70 period, a special study for the RCMP discloses.

The study by Statistics Canada was done primarily to isolate the use of handguns — pistols or revolvers — in killings.

Handguns were used in only 10.4 per cent, or 246, of the slayings in the 10-year period.

The occurrence of handgun slayings in Canada is in sharp contrast to the United States, where FBI statistics show they were used in 54 per cent of 1970 slayings, a statistician said today.

Restrictive laws make handguns far less available in Canada than in the U.S. But rifles and shotguns are common to many homes in Canada and figured in 856 of the 1,174 firearm slayings in 1961-70.

Rifles were involved in more than 25 per cent — one in four — of all slayings in the country in the 10-year period.

Of the total of 593 rifle slayings, 377 were domestic — a family fight. A domestic situation was involved in 103 of the 168 shotgun slayings.

Anti-Savings Bond Drive Begun by Boeing Workers

SEATTLE (AP) — Workers at Boeing Co. installations here have begun an anti-U.S. Savings Bond campaign to protest the federal pay board's veto of a 12-per-cent wage increase.

The protest drive, initiated by about 150 workers, encouraged employees to cancel their authorizations for payroll deductions for bonds. Workers also demonstrated in front of the suburban Auburn plant.

B.C. Has Fewest

QC Appointments Adequate—Locke

VANCOUVER (CP) — The highest elected official in the British Columbia Law Society said Thursday the Queen's Counsel appointment is adequately controlled by provincial legislation.

Society treasurer Charles C. Locke, who holds the award himself, said that B.C. has the lowest proportion of QCs in Canada, seven per cent, once the 23 lawyers, recently awarded the title by Attorney-General Les Peterson, are included.

"I'm proud of the legislation (the Queen's Counsel Act) in B.C. limiting the number of QCs that can be appointed," Locke said.

"In other provinces, the percentage varies from 25 to as high as 60 (in Quebec), the average being between 25 and 45 per cent."

Locke said it is his personal opinion that the number of QCs in B.C. should be increased "to take care of the growth of the profession, and in recognition of the large number of competent lawyers who now serve it."

He pointed out that there now are more than 2,000 lawyers in B.C., compared to about 1,000 when the yearly limit of appointments was set.

British Troops On Malta Alert

LONDON (UPI) — Britain plans to keep control of Laga Airport in Malta until all 3,500 British troops and airmen are pulled out, government sources said Friday.

They said if necessary, Britain will send in "a larger number" of additional troops. Government sources said these would be to help pack military equipment and stores.

But other sources said they could also be used to help defend the airport against an harassment by Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff.

There have been reports Mintoff might call in troops from Libya.

Officials said evacuation of the 5,000 dependants will be completed by Jan. 15 but that it will take up to 90 days to pull out troops, airmen, stores and military equipment.

The award-winning TV special that everyone should watch!

"The Early Years"

FROM THE HUMAN JOURNEY SERIES

This award-winning TV Special, commissioned by London Life, shows the importance of pre-school years in a child's development.

Every man and woman whether parents, grandparents, or still single will be fascinated by the new information presented in the program.

- For instance, how would you answer these questions?
- * What do three-year-olds and Nobel prize-winners have in common?
- * At what age does an infant start to learn?
- * What are the best kinds of crib toys for infants, and why are they so important?
- * How should you answer children's questions?
- * When does an infant give up its role of spectator and become a participant, a mover-doer?
- * What is the role of a father in pre-school years?
- * At what age can a baby discriminate between familiar and strange faces?
- * What is the importance of the ancient game of peek-a-boo?
- * How does a child learn to talk and read?
- * Why should parents become involved with their children's day-care or nursery school personnel?

These are just a few of the questions that are answered in this powerfully dramatic and informative television special. A program that has won several awards including the top documentary award in the Canadian Film Festival last year.

Dr. Jerome Kagan, Dr. Burton White, Dr. Glenn Doman, Dr. John Gilbert, and Mrs. Francis Burger are some of the well-known specialists who will give you new insights into "The Early Years." And you will see what is probably the most moving birth of a baby that has ever been shown on television.

London Life commissioned this series of programs, under the title "The Human Journey," because the Company believes that it is important for all of us to examine new ideas and concepts about life—even if we don't agree with all of them!

FREE OFFER! London Life has prepared a 16-page booklet based on material gathered for "The Early Years." And has prepared an up-to-date booklet giving straightforward facts about life insurance programs. For your free copies write to: London Life Insurance Company, Box 5560, Dept. ## Ships Collide CAPE TOWN (AP) — Two 9,000-ton freighters collided 35 miles off Cape Town Friday, and one of them, the Panamanian Santa Artemis, sank. Twenty-one of the 26 crew members were reported rescued.

Cooper is neither a hero of sorts nor a Robin Hood by any definition," he says. "He endangered the lives of innocent people and his actions encourage similar behavior by others who might also have aberrant inclinations."

Toyota Now Third

NAGOYA, Japan (UPI) — Toyota Motor Co., Japan's largest automobile maker, announced Friday it has become the world's third largest car maker next to U.S. companies of General Motors and Ford.

The announcement said Toyota produced 1,955,033 motor vehicles in 1971, an increase of 21.5 per cent over 1970. Of this number passenger cars totaled 1,400,186, trucks 544,616 and buses 10,231. Volkswagen of West Germany previously was third.

The announcement said exports totaled 786,287, up 63.2 per cent over 1970.

Exports to the United States totaled 395,788, an increase of 88.9 per cent over the previous year despite U.S. economic policies instituted last summer to slow down imports.

List of Stocks Published By Revenue Department

The following list of Valuation Day Values of publicly traded shares and securities is from a booklet prepared by the department of national revenue. Valuation Day was set as Dec. 22, 1971, for such purposes.

This list gives the value the department will accept for tax purposes unless the taxpayer can establish some other value.

The table shows the value as of Dec. 22 in Canadian funds. The value is the closing price from the exchange with the largest volume on Dec. 22 for that security; the last closing price in the four didn't trade Dec. 22; or the mid-point between the last bid and ask price if it didn't trade Dec. 22 or in the previous four weeks.

Where no prices are shown, the department says holders of such investments will have

The department's booklet Day will be Dec. 31, 1971.

As in the cases where no prices are shown for securities on the list, the department says holders will have to determine values by consulting published listings of transactions on stock exchanges, investment publications, or investment dealers.

Surrey May Still Cut Welfare Crew

SURREY (CP) — The Surrey welfare budget may still be cut despite opposition from rehabilitation minister Phil Gaglardi, Mayor William Vander Zalm said Friday.

Gaglardi said Thursday the mayor would have to drop his plan to cut costs by reducing the municipality's welfare staff to 40 from 40 persons.

The Municipal Act forces the municipality to maintain adequate welfare staff, Gaglardi said his officials have told him.

Vander Zalm said: "I feel cuts can still be made, but not to the same degree."

He said the city solicitor and manager are preparing reports on the situation which will be presented to council Jan. 17.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A joint charge of robbery with violence was in effect dropped Friday in Victoria Provincial Court against two young Victoria men who once were sentenced to two-year prison terms in connection with the same case.

The two men, Rodney Carl Fraser and Allan Louie, were not present when prosecutor John Macintyre rose to inform Judge William Ostler he had been instructed by the provincial attorney-general's department to enter a stay of proceedings, which in effect means the charge is dropped.

The two had pleaded guilty last July 20 to the joint charge, laid by Victoria police after three persons accused a 14-year-old boy in front of 1366 Johnson. The boy was struck several times and robbed of $7.45, all the money he had.

Ostler sentenced the two July 21 to two-year terms but the case later went to the B.C. Appeal Court, which quashed the charges and ordered that the matter be returned to provincial Court.

There was no response when court officials called the name of Edward Gordon, 36, of 1010 Linden, on a charge of causing a disturbance by being drunk, making him the first person to fail to answer the "verbal appearance notice" system being used by Victoria police.

Canadian law changes which went into effect last weekend add an appearance notice to arrest and summons as methods of detaining suspects but proper notice forms are not ready and police have been giving verbal notices until they are — in about a week.

Ostler said he could not take any action other than suggest Macintyre should seek a summons against Gordon which Macintyre indicated he would do.

Donald Glen Cole, 19, address not known, was sentenced to a total of one month and 28 days after pleading guilty Dec. 31 to two charges.

One was a charge of theft involving less than $50 in taking $6.94 worth of gasoline Dec. 22 from a service station at 298 Island Highway in the Colwood area, for which Cole was sentenced to one month.

The other was a Victoria charge of driving while under a licence suspension and driving without insurance Dec. 31. Cole was sentenced to 14 days on each count and all three terms were made consecutive by Ostler.

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson adjourned the case of Ralph Pashley, 51, of 3945 Cedar Hill Cross Road, to Monday for sentence after accepting evidence presented by prosecutor Peter Birkett showing Pashley had a conviction in 1968 for impaired driving.

Pashley had been found guilty Dec. 21 following a trial on a charge of impaired driving last April 2 in Victoria. A jail sentence is mandatory for a second such offence.

Defence lawyer Dermot Owen-Flood said the conviction already has been appealed and new federal laws allow release of an accused person in such a case until the appeal is heard. But if Robinson had ordered a jail term Friday, papers for the release could not have been prepared until Monday — the reason for the deferment.

Ross Clarence Gooderham, 44, of 341 Island Highway, was found guilty by Robinson following a trial on a charge of false pretences involving more than $50, then pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining lodgings by fraud.

The first charge concerned purchases made by Gooderham in various parts of B.C. between June 26 and Aug. 9 last year through use of a credit card owned by an employer who fired him June 15.

The second involved a $29.40 bill at a Victoria hotel Aug. 22 and 30.

On the first charge, Robinson gave Gooderham a suspended sentence and an 18-month probationary term and ordered him to repay $467.13 to the credit card owner. Penalty on the other charge was a $35 fine.

James Edward Askey, 33, of 2819 Adelaide, was sentenced to 14 days in jail and given a partial six-month driving ban after pleading guilty to a charge of being impaired Dec. 11 in Esquimalt while in care or control of a vehicle.

Two persons pleaded guilty before Robinson to separate charges of impaired driving in Esquimalt. Thorvald Anson, 63, of 3072 Col. Ave., stopped Dec. 13, was fined $300 and given a partial two-month driving ban and Frederick John Phillips, 19, of 478 Grafton, stopped Dec. 11, was fined $350 and given a three-month driving ban.

Strike Vote Date

Hospital Staffs Show Militancy

Members of the Hospital Employees Union who work at St. Joseph's Hospital will take a strike vote Wednesday, Jan. 19, says a notice displayed in the hospital.

St. Joseph's is the first hospital in Greater Victoria at which an HEU strike vote has been announced.

The union has indicated it will be taking strike votes at a number of other B.C. hospitals this month. The first such vote was held Friday at Lions Gate Hospital, North Vancouver, where 87.8 per cent of the HEU members supported strike action.

"The turnout at the two meetings exceeded our own expectations," said Ray McCready, secretary-business manager of HEU after the North Vancouver vote. "The membership is showing militancy and unity of purpose not seen before."

No strike dates have been announced. Negotiations between HEU and B.C. Hospitals' Association terminated when B.C. Hospital Insurance Service announced that the government would not share in wage and salary increases that exceed 6.5 per cent per year.

HEU bargains for employee groups at Royal Jubilee,

Queen Alexandra Solarium and most other hospitals on Vancouver Island.

The Registered Nurses Association of B.C., also seeking renewal of a contract, has started negotiating with the hospitals with the assistance of a mediation officer.

Gas Export Approved

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board Wednesday granted permission for an additional 59.5 million barrels of propane to be exported from the province.

The board's decision, subject to approval from the provincial government, authorized Dome Petroleum Ltd. and Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd. to export an additional 38.9 million barrels — reduced from a requested 33.2 million barrels.

It also approved an application by TransCanada Gas Products Ltd. and Dome Petroleum to remove an additional 20.6 million barrels of propane.

Dome and Amoco also had their existing 25-year permit for the removal of propane extended to Dec. 31, 1995.

Proceedings Stayed

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Prosecutor William Kirkwood stayed proceedings Thursday on a charge of criminal negligence against a Calgary man in connection with the death of a North Vancouver woman in a health spa Sept. 3.

Mother of Six Jailed For Taking College Cash

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — A mother of six was sentenced to a maximum 15 years in prison Friday after pleading guilty to a charge of embezzlement while head cashier at nearby eastern Washington State College.

Mrs. Helen Poland, 46, Tyler, Wash., was accused of embezzling "as much as $71,000" but specifically charged with taking an $88 registration fee on Feb. 16, 1970.

In court Friday, the slightly-built woman told Superior Court Judge Raymond Kelly she hadn't taken "that much," meaning $71,000. She did admit, however, taking "more than $10,000" and agreed it could be as much as $30,000.

Mrs. Poland's attorney said she hadn't squandered any of the money she took and had used it for family support after divorcing an alcoholic husband who allegedly beat her.

Her attorney said the woman used "some of the money for psychiatric care for one of her children and some for cancer surgery for herself."

A lengthy pre-sentence report recommended "leniency and mercy."

Filth Stops Fish Spawning

EDSON, Alta. (CP) — Luscious Creek is black with silt and there has been no successful spawning of fish in the creek for four years, Chuck Lane, a biologist with the Alberta fish and wildlife department, told Provincial Court Friday.

Lane was testifying into charges of pollution against Cardinal River Coal Co., engaged in a coal strip mining operation in the Luscious area, 150 miles west of Edmonton. Charges were laid by the fish and wildlife department in June, 1971.

Lane, the crown's final witness, described the creek as black with silt near the point of entry of effluent from the company's silo. He also noted a lack of algae at the same point.

In a one mile stretch of the creek downstream from the point of entry of the effluent, he said.

In similar mountain streams tested in the area, a one mile stretch indicated a fish population of 1,500. Lane also said there had been no change in the condition of the creek from June, 1971, to September.

Judge Carl Roll of Edmonton adjourned the case to Edmonton Jan. 25, at which time the defence will present its case.

SIMPSONS-SEARS HILLSIDE, 3190 SHELBOURNE STREET — LOTS OF FREE PARKING... NO TICKETS... NO TIME LIMIT.

Jim Tang

Those of us who aren't ever going to write a book are likely to soon be a minority group. And nowhere, recently at least, has there been more writing activity than in the sports field, where Jim Tang has been writing since he started a decade or so ago but where the real push came from the success of Jerry Brown's Instant Replay and the attention commanded by Jim Bouton's Ball Four.

What a push it has been and what a hunt it has caused for something to write about. New books keep showing up in confusing array, some with rookie authors breaking in on old subject material and others with veteran writers offering something new or different. Or vice versa. The results have been quite a bit of wasted time, quite a bit that has interest for a limited audience and an occasional gem. All categories are represented in the latest publications reaching here.

In the latter category is a book, Print On My Heart. It was authored by Jim Coleman, perhaps Canada's best-known sports columnist and a fellow who proudly claims a life-long addiction to horse racing and draws on the experiences of a full life and a long journalistic career to write about it with a loving irreverence.

What Coleman has wrought is a delightfully fascinating account of that addiction. Or affliction. A Print On My Heart is peopled with characters. Damon Runyon would have loved to have known and the affectionate humor, which is often almost hilarious, with which they are presented does them full justice.

There is much in the book which will bring back memories to long-time Vancouver Islanders. Coleman attended University School, and while this was early in his love affair with horse racing he didn't let education interfere with his wooing. The Colwood and Willow race tracks are familiar grounds in his memory and among those he mentions in his book are Barney Olson, Ash "Ace" Smith, Major Proby, Winnipeg Chilton, Jessie Mackenzie, Massie White, General "One-Arm" Sutton, Gyp and Ma Emmert, Billy Bell, Johnny Park, Dr. W. J. McKee and jockeys Red Pollard and Scotty Craig-myle. And such thoroughbreds as Simony, Jim Rogan, Boot Top and Col. Boyle.

Just as extensive are Coleman's experiences with racing on the prairies and in eastern Canada. A Print On My Heart is just about reading for any veteran race-track follower, but no one needs to be a horse-racing fan to enjoy it. McLeod and Stewart, who put this on the market at $6.95, surely have a hit.

The Gamemakers is about professional football's great quarterbacks from Sammy Baugh to Joe Namath and is written by George Sullivan, who has a number of football books to his credit.

He considers 17 quarterbacks good enough to be included. In between Baugh and Namath are the stories of Sid Luckman, Bob Waterfield, Otto Graham, Bobby Layne, Charlie Conerly, Y. A. Tittle, Norm Van Brocklin, Johnny Unitas, Bart Starr, Len Dawson, John Brodie, Sonny Jurgensen, Fran Tarkenton, Roman Gabriel and Daryle Lamolina.

The records of the 17 are also included along with quite a number of illustrations, including diagrams of favorite plays. The Gamemakers is published by G. P. Putnam's Sons and, if memory serves, is priced at about $10. Ardent football fans are likely to feel it's worth the price even if they believe, as I do, that George Blanda should not have been left out.

The Stanley Cup Story, is, as it implies, the history of the Stanley Cup — right from the time it was put up for competition. It is the work of Henry Roxborough, and it includes many little-known and interesting stories about clubs, players and officials as well as events. There are chapters on King Clancy, Foster Hewitt, the NHL expansion years, the Hockey Hall of Fame and it lists the Stanley Cup winners up to 1971 complete with lineup and team and individual playoff records. It's a $5.95 item from McGraw-Hill Ryerson and a fine reference book for the staunch NHL fan.

Les Canadiens turned out to be a bit of a disappointment, even to a hockey fan who has had them as his favorite team ever since Howie Morenz was a boyhood idol.

This is subject-matter seldom matched — the greatest record in hockey resulting from the performance of a never-ending list of colorful performers such as Didier Pitre, Newey Lalonde and Joe Malone, who played together on one of the first great lines, and Georges Vézina, Skinner Poulin, Sprague and Odie Cleghorn, Billy Boucher, Billy Coutts, Morenz, Aurel Joliat, Johnny Gagnon, George Hainsworth, Babe Siebert, Sylvio and Georges Mantha, Maurice and Henri Richard, Bernie Geoffrion, Doug Harvey, Tom Blake, Jacques Plante, Doug Harvey, Bill Durnan, Dickie Moore, Kenny Reardon and, to cut it short, Jean Beliveau.

No one could really miss with that kind of material, and author Andy O'Brien has much that is interesting between the covers of the $5.95 McGraw-Hill Ryerson publication. But it seems hurriedly put together, has no particular continuity and leaves one with the feeling that there is too much that is missing. Which is as could be expected. There was too much to say, and that can be just as bad as not having enough to write about unless more time and space is devoted than it was in this case.

Visitors Top Hockey Vikings With Third-Period Surge

University of Calgary Dinosaurs rammed in five goals in the final period to beat visiting University of Victoria Vikings, 8-2, Friday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre and extend Vikings' Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association Hockey League losing streak to eight games this season.

Calgary's Richardson brothers picked up three points each. Frank had two goals and an assist and Steve assisted on John Fraser's two goals and on one by Robi Wright. Tom Wiseman scored twice and Howie Colborne once to round out Dinosaurs' scoring.

Jack Richardson and Dave Stapleford scored first-period goals 52 seconds apart to give visitors the lead 2-0.

Next games: Today—Calgary at Victoria; Alberta at British Columbia; Brandon at Saskatchewan; Winnipeg at Manitoba.

Soccer Superstar Loses His Place

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — George Best, superstar of British soccer, was excluded in his country home Friday after a vanishing act that lost him his place in the Manchester United team for Saturday's league game.

Team manager Frank O'Farrell said Best had not trained with the team all this week. The temperamental Irish star has been in a slump.

Best, 26, declined to say why he had stopped training and lost contact with friends throughout the week.

O'Farrell, announcing his lineup for a home game against the Wolverhampton Wanderers, said: "I have decided to leave George Best out. He has not trained all week and therefore he is not fit to play against Wolverhampton."

Up-Island Rinks Make Bad Start

Up-Island rinks got off to a bad start Thursday in the first round of play in the south Vancouver Island women's curling playoffs at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Both Lake Cowichan rinks and two of the three Duncan rinks were among the eight losers, only Marg Harper making it to the eighth of the "A" event in the double knockout competition. And she pushed reluctant Alyce Blom into the "B" side.

It looked for a while as if Lake Cowichan's Grace Deans would be numbered among the winners but she ended up as the most entertaining of the losers — on the short end of a 14-12 score in a high-scoring game against Nan Sexton of Play-lan.

Mrs. Deans scored five on the first end, four on the third end for a 9-3 lead. Then she followed with a three on the sixth after giving up singles on the fourth and fifth ends and seemed to be safely in control at 12-5. Then things went wrong and Mrs. Sexton's crew kept the chalk to win it with a tie-breaking two on the home end.

And the only out-of-town rink in the schoolgirls playoff also went down to defeat, Bonnie Harper of Duncan losing to Kathy Taylor of the Racquet Club, 10-2.

Sixteen rinks are entered in the women's playoff and five student foursomes are battling for the berth in the island final. Play resumes this morning at 10.

Jayvees Win

VANCOUVER — University of Victoria Jayvees scored a 56-54 exhibition men's basketball victory over British Columbia Institute of Technology here Friday night. Brian Wright scored 19 points to lead the winners. Ken Myette had 25 for BCIT.

Jayvees play an exhibition game tonight against Trinity College.

University of Alberta Golden Bears stretched their unbeaten streak to seven games with a 5-3 win over University of British Columbia Thunderbirds at Vancouver. University of Manitoba trounced Prairie Division-leading University of Winnipeg Wesmen, 12-4, and University of Saskatchewan Huskies downed Brandon University Bobcats, 4-2, in other Friday action.

Lakers Score 33rd Straight Win

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers extended their record-shattering winning streak to 33 games Friday night, routing Atlanta Hawks, 134-90, in National Basketball Association action.

Jim McMillian led the way early and Gail Goodrich late as the Lakers made their victory one of the easiest in their long string.

By shooting 62.5 per cent in the first half and holding the Hawks to 35.8, Los Angeles turned the game into an early runaway.

The Lakers have not tasted defeat since Oct. 31. They surpassed the Milwaukee Bucks' old NBA record of 20 consecutive victories on Dec. 12 and broke the professional sports record of 26, held by the baseball New York Giants of 1916, on Dec. 22.

McMillian got 20 of his 26 points in the first half and Goodrich got 18 of his 23 in the second half. With Chamberlain, the ageing patriarch of NBA wars, was the dominating factor under the boards throughout.

The Hawks, who also were the victims when the Lakers set the new NBA record in December, were led by Pete Maravich with 17 points.

Lakers face a stiff test Sunday when they meet Milwaukee Bucks in a game which will be televised nationally. (The game will be shown at 11 a.m. on Channel 4.)

Ex-Cougars Return Tonight To Meet Former Bombers

It will be a reunion with a difference tonight when Flin Flon Bombers make their second appearance of the Western Canada Hockey League season at Memorial Arena.

When Victoria Cougars and Flin Flon Bombers opened the WCHL season here Oct. 9, few of the players knew each other.

Now, most should be on speaking terms because it's the first meeting between the clubs since an extensive trading session which moved six Victoria players to the Manitoba city in exchange for five Bombers.

Of the four ex-Bombers still in Victoria (Rod Loynachan was recently traded to Winnipeg), three are definite starters tonight. Centre Perry Robinson, who froze his knees over the Christmas break at his Manitoba home, is skating but still on the injury list.

POINT TO PROVE

The other three (Don Morrison, Jim Carter and George Pesut) are really up for the game and want to prove to their ex-teammates they lost nothing by coming to Victoria, coach Fred Hucel said Friday.

Ex-Cougars Jack McIlhargy, Barry Chernow, Len Chalmers, Garry Howatt, Wayne Bianchin and Harvey Schmidt should be equally determined to show well before their former fans. Only Schmidt is a doubtful starter after wrenching a knee in Edmonton earlier this week.

ON TOP LINE

Bomber coach Pat Ginnell is especially impressed with Howatt, who has been teamed with high-scoring Blaine Stoughton and Al Hillier to form one of the top scoring units in the Eastern Division.

"With the exception of Loynachan, the trades have worked very well for both clubs," Cougar general manager Eric Bishop added. "The Flin Flon players are a large part of our team and the players that went to the Bombers are all playing regularly."

STARTS AT 8:30

Cougars won the opening game, 5-3, then dropped 4-1 and 4-3 decisions in the Manitoba city.

Tonight's game, which starts at 8:30, opens a three-game Cougar home stand which has New Westminster here on Wednesday and Swift Current Broncos visiting next Saturday.

Howatt kept Cougars in a fifth-place tie with Vancouver Friday by scoring a goal and adding three assists as the Bombers topped the Nats, 7-4, in one of five WCHL games.

FOUR GOAL SPURT

Bombers trailed Nats, 4-3, early in the third period in Vancouver before Howatt, Dave Shallow, Dennis Polonich and Ken Wright scored in a 13-minute span. McIlhargy, Chernow and Chalmers also earned an assist each.

Hillier added two goals and Stoughton scored once to complete the Bomber scoring while Wayne Paulsen, John Dais, Tom Gawryletz and Marv Lank tallied for the Nats, who outshot Flin Flon, 38-26.

In other Friday action, Calgary Centennials retained their one-point lead in the Western Division by defeating the Jets, 3-1, in Winnipeg, while Edmonton Oil Kings kept pace by edging the visiting Swift Current Broncos, 6-4. Regina Pats topped Brandon, 5-2, and Saskatoon Blades scored their third straight interlocking win, 6-3, over the visiting Medicine Hat Tigers.

Marty Kissel, Derek Black and Bob Nystrom scored for the Centennials against former Cougar netminder Dave Maynard while Jeff Hunt broke John Davidson's shutout bid with a goal less than two minutes from time.

Don Kozak scored two goals, including what proved to be the winner for the Oil Kings with John Rogers, Terry Smith, Phil Russell and Keith Mackie adding one goal each.

Terry Ruskowski, Wayne Inglis, Dan McCarthy and Terry McDougall scored for Swift Current, with three of the goals coming in the last eight minutes.

Clark Gillies scored twice for Regina as the Pats maintained their two-point lead atop the Eastern Division.

By GENE HANDSAKER

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — In the swimming pool behind his magnificent home in posh Beverly Hills, Pat Boone baptizes the repentant.

In the last year and a half, the singer-actor estimates he has immersed 250 persons who have newly committed themselves to Christianity.

"Entertainers' wives and kids, young ex-drug addicts, older ex-alcoholics, business people—just about every kind of people," says the boyish Boone, 37. "I'm just the midwife at a spiritual birth."

He says the candidates are not baptized into any particular denomination but into the "body of Christ." This, incidentally, is also the general concept of baptism in most major churches.

If the setting for Boone's ministrations seems incongruous — the $350,000 to $400,000 estates on palm-shaded streets near the swank Beverly Hills Hotel — so does his own role in the ritual.

In the brassy world of show business, he admits, "Let's face it — I'm an oddity."

Insult comic Don Rickles has called him "Mr. Clean," "Pat Bland" and "Gloxy White shoes."

Such epithets, Pat writes in his latest book, A New Song, "cast me in the role of a square, a guy just a little bit out of the mainstream of life. And I was starting to wonder, myself."

Born in Jacksonville, Fla., the son of a building contractor, Boone was reared in the Church of Christ in suburban Nashville. He preached for one of its churches, and performed his first baptisms, for about a year while attending North Texas State College.

But in the mid-1960s, after winning top honors on the Ted Mack and Arthur Godfrey talent shows, recording such million-sellers as Love Letters in the Sand and April Love and coming to Hollywood, Pat began to backslide.

He started drinking at cocktail parties. Previously shy, he found it easy to talk to women. He began telling off-color stories. On his first visit to Las Vegas he lost $2,500 gambling.

His marriage to the former Shirley Foley, daughter of the late country and western singer, Red Foley, nearly fell apart. Their four daughters knew of the coolness and friction between them.

Pat describes it all, his career troubles and the "miracle" that saved him from financial ruin, in the book. In an interview he said his "reawakening" or "regeneration" coincided with the birth of the so-called Jesus Movement among the long-haired group.

"I'm one of the Jesus people, a street Christian," he said. Boone has brown hair, clear brown eyes, a relaxed manner and a warm, soft, resonant voice.

Ironically, he and his family recently were "distilled" by the Inglewood Church of Christ they had attended for 10 years because of that church's disapproval of glossolalia — "speaking in unknown tongues" through power of the Holy Spirit — an experience Boone affirms.

On Sundays the family of "footloose young Christians" visits various churches. Mormons, Methodists and the Assembly of God have besought the distillings Boone's membership, Pat said, but:

"I've been trying to make them see, in a friendly, loving way, that I don't want to join a church with a rigid set of rules because I don't read about that in the New Testament."

Protestants Urged To Aid Catholics

TORONTO (CP) — Protestants should support Roman Catholic missions in countries where other faiths dominate.

Jefferson attended the final Assembly of the World Council of Christian Education in Lima, Peru, recently and spent some time in Mexico.

He said that at least 98 per cent of the Mexican people are Roman Catholic.

Canon Philip Jefferson, writing in the current issue of the national Anglican Church newspaper, Canadian Churchman, says various Protestant groups are struggling for survival in efforts to support their own missions in countries like Mexico.

He suggested Roman Catholics should support development and educational projects

Metropolitan United, Jan. 28

Church Head Coming

The moderator of the United Church of Canada — Rev. Dr. Arthur Moore — will address an ecumenical rally in Metropolitan United Church at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 28.

The moderator will also preach in Centennial United Church at the 11 a.m. service the following Sunday.

Moore was elected to the highest position in his church at its 24th general council in Niagara Falls one year ago. He was chairman of the United Church's board of World Missions from 1964 to 1968 and for several years has been co-chairman of the General Commission on Church Union which is negotiating union between his church, the Anglican and the Christian (Disciples of Christ) Churches in Canada.

He was appointed president of the Canadian Council of Churches in 1969 for a period of three years.

Now in his 66th year, he is a native of Kewich Ridge, near Fredericton, N.B., where his father was minister of the Congregational Church which joined with Methodists and Presbyterians to form the United Church in 1925.

He took post-graduate work at Oxford after graduation from McGill University and served the church in Montreal, Eagan, Pa., Ottawa, and Saskatoon.

He was principal of St. Andrew's Theological College, Saskatoon, from 1948 to 1950 and vice-chancellor of Victoria College at the University of Toronto, a position he held until he retired in June, 1970. Up to the age of 33, Moore played hockey. As a young man he played bush league, later at McGill and when he was studying at Oxford had a chance to play with a professional British team but he returned to Canada instead.

The moderator is a life watcher. He and his wife last year took a three-month trip around the world during which he had a chance to follow his hobby, especially in Kenya, where they stayed for several weeks.

Two English Churches Combine

LONDON (Reuters) — Presbyterians and Congregationalists in England have voted to combine into a single church with a membership of about 200,000.

A joint announcement today by the Presbyterian Church of England and the Congregational Church of England and Wales said they will join in October to form the United Reformed Church.

The announcement was made after a poll of the Presbyterian Church's 59,000 members and the Congregationalists' 167,000 broadly endorsed approval of the merger, given by the assembly of each church last May.

The merger does not affect either Northern Ireland or Scotland, where Presbyterians are the predominant Protestant group.

Army Adds 'Noise'

Something new has been added at the Victoria Citadel of The Salvation Army.

The Salvationist Youth, during the Christmas holidays, had their first formal dinner party complete with music by A Joyful Noise, the band of the Salvationist Youth.

"The meal was cooked by the mothers of the young people," said Major Donald McMillan, commanding officer of the Citadel. "And the fathers served the dinner in white shirts and black bow ties with the proverbial towel over the arm."

Almost 60 young persons attended the dinner and entertainment and David Ivany of Vancouver Temple Salvation Army came to Victoria to be master of ceremonies.

But there was no dancing. It is not allowed in Salvation Army circles, said Sue McMillan, who is president of the Salvationist Youth.

The formal dinner party, which inaugurated the group's activities for 1972, will become an annual event, she said.

Throughout the year the young people will organize an outing each month — roller skating, swimming, ice skating, bowling, corn roasts.

And once a month they will meet at the Citadel for special events such as Cowboy Night, Back-to-Childhood Night and others, Sue said.

Some evenings are spent listening to the music of the Beatles and to the rock opera Jesus Christ Superstar, she said.

A Joyful Noise is a busy band. The group entertains at various churches and young people's society meetings.

It is made up of Oaklands Gospel Chapel members — Laurie Dash, bass guitar; Paul Troop, electric guitar; Derek Finlayson, trumpet; Jack Funk, drum; John Fryer, acoustic guitar; Rose-Grey, trumpet; and Mike

VOICE OF ONE

Youth's State: Ethical Chaos

By Dr. FRANK MORLEY

Youth is in a state of ethical confusion without guidelines or definite moral concepts. In both Judaism and Christianity there was an ethical centrality which maintained that men were to resemble God. "Be ye holy for I the Lord your God am holy." Not rites, not ritual, not sacrifice and not culture were central but rather an inner rectitude, decency, a fixation of the will on fulfilling the purposes of God. One finds this in prophets like Amos and Micah who abhorred the temple ceremonial which lacked spiritual dedication. "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

Perversion

The author of the Deuteronomistic code spelled out ethical behavior and sexual deviation or immorality and perversion were punishable by death. The Ten Commandments were specific in condemning killing, adultery, stealing, and breaking the Sabbath day. But this was not enough, one had to have the spirit of true holiness. Thus Ezekiel is shocked by the ghastly obscenity and idolatry, the demonism and fetishism being practised behind the elaborate worship of the temple. Amos is very bitter that there are great feasts days and holy days instead of righteousness and justice.

Immorality

There is a sickness abroad today, however, which justifies all immorality and makes a man's ethics his own private affair. For this the phrase "situation ethics" is greatly to blame. It holds that there are no absolutes, indeed no unbreakable rules, but that at certain times and under certain conditions, convenience, killing, adultery, and stealing could be justifiable. There are no laws of God any more. The only law is the law of love which is described in such vagueness that anything may be done as long as one has a benign, vacuous emotion like the grin on a Cheshire cat. This new morality is very closely related to the "God is dead" theology. "This phrase 'love alone' discards justice, moral responsibility, social relationships and all that men have held to be virtuous and decent and is downright dishonest and hypocritical.

No Guidelines

"Situation ethics" leaves a young person or any person, for that matter, without any moral guidelines whatever and all kinds of devilish excuses can be invented to justify any act. There is nothing new in this immorality. It is as old as the ancient Romans or, for that matter, the Garden of Eden. The devil argues with Eve that the fruit of the tree was good, "good for food and it was pleasant to the eye, and the tree to be desired to make one wise," so naturally "she took of the fruit thereof and did eat and gave also unto her husband with her and he did eat." It was the first attempt of men to write his own Ten Commandments. It was a tragic failure that drove man from the Garden of Eden and will always drive him out of his gardens as history has proved. This "new morality" is a relativistic ethics of total toleration in which everything goes in the disgusting, aberrational name of love.

Self Destruction

Our civilization is being destroyed because of its lack of principle, its failure to have sense of direction and dedication to high ideals and ultimate objectives. Historians looking back will see how this civilization destroyed itself with its hostility, the license given in homosexuality, the endorsement of abortion, the casual attitude to adultery, the acceptance of lying in politics and cheating in business, and the disappearance of moral indignation. Moral indignation is considered out of date today and every abomination is tolerated, therefore, it is bad form to criticize anybody or any nation because everybody and all nations do similarly evil things. Our boasted Temple of Modern Civilization covers ghastly corruption, inhumanity and injustices, such as have never been perpetrated in the history of man, the reason being that science has made available more fearful ways of destruction and torture. One day historians will write the obituary of this civilization. "It laughed at the Ten Commandments."

Christianity's Relevance Sermon Topic

The relevance of practical Christianity will be brought out in a Bible lesson-sermon entitled Sacrament at 9:30 and 11 a.m. Sunday in First Church of Christ, Scientist.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do because I go unto my Father."

These words of Christ Jesus are included in the scriptural readings. One of the citations to be read from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy states: "The hour has struck when proof and demonstration, instead of opinion and dogma, are summoned in the support of Christianity, making wise the simple."

NDP Leader Scores Greed

If the churches of Canada were really doing their job, they would be "revolutionaries in society," NDP leader David Lewis says in an interview with editor A. C. Forrest in the current United Church Observer.

"One of the things that is memorable about Jesus was the courage and vision which chased the users out of the temple. If the churches were doing their job, they would be busy chasing the greedy powers out of society," Lewis said.

Asked by Forrest, "Do you expect the truly religious man to be a socialist?" Lewis replied, "I do. I find it impossible to reconcile exploitation and ruthless competition and greed with any religion."

The interview with the NDP leader followed one with Prime Minister Trudeau which appeared in The Observer last fall. An interview with Conservative leader Robert Stanfield will appear in March.

Forrest asked Lewis, as he did the other leaders, about his own religious beliefs. Lewis said he did not attend synagogue, "not very often anyway," and that belief in God was "a subject I haven't delved into very much for a good many years." "I think what matters is the relationship of man to man," he said.

See Doctor-Pharmacist*Cold Remedies Harmful

EDMONTON (CP) — Non-prescription drugs being taken by persons to ease the symptoms of colds or influenza may do more harm than good, the registrar of the Alberta Pharmaceutical Association said Thursday.

Donald Cameron said in an interview the danger lies in the fact such drugs might mask the symptoms of a condition which requires treatment by a physician.

"The drugs might be making a person feel okay but he might be better off if he felt worse. Then, at least, he would seek medical attention."

"Many times, if you'd gone to a doctor in time, you'd be at home or at work, rather than in the hospital in an oxygen tent."

Dr. Robert Clark, executive-secretary of the Alberta Medical Association, agreed with Cameron but said people shouldn't run to the doctor for every little complaint "like the sniffles."

"We expect that people will use judgment."

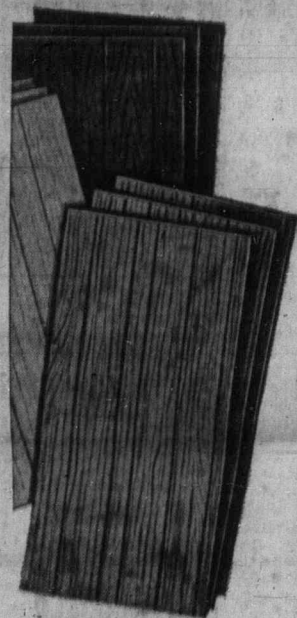

Dr. Clark said persons with cold or influenza symptoms which persist for "three or four days" should be aware complications might be developing.

"And that goes double" for those with heart trouble, asthma, the elderly and the young. Cameron was critical of drug-sales promotions described as "so pleasantly presented and nicely phrased they lead people to believe such drugs are the whole answer to the common cold."

OTTAWA (CP)—An Ottawa pilot pleaded guilty in provincial court Friday to flying a plane while impaired and was fined $250. Evidence admitted in court showed the plane that Kenneth Marie was flying swooped as low as 100 feet above his suburban Ottawa home several times in order to take photographs. His flying licence is to be suspended.

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the president and half the executive of the Liberal association in the federal constituency of Leeds are expected to resign from the party this month because they are fed up with Prime Minister Trudeau and "what's going on in Ottawa."

The paper quotes George Fulford, a former member of Parliament and the Ontario legislature, as saying: "We're all Liberals. I just say this fellow in Ottawa is not a Liberal."

There has been unrest among Liberals in the riding for some time, and Fulford's statement, as quoted in the paper, is the latest.

Besides Fulford, the association vice-president, others expected to resign at a Jan. 14 meeting are Tom Cossitt, president; Ernest Miller, a vice-president; Mrs. Ann Fishman, president of the Rideau Women's Liberal Association and Talmadge Stone, a township representative.

The paper quotes Fulford as saying he does not like the way Trudeau is running the country.

"We don't know where he's taking us. He's neglecting Ontario... and I don't like his foreign policy."

He said he would support Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield in the next federal election.

The constituency has been represented since 1968 by Desmond Cole, a Conservative.

He has taken his case to restore the Red Ensign as Canada's flag to court innumerable times, and in the latest proceeding last September, lost in the B.C. Court of Appeal. In October, he started two more actions.

Greater Victoria Red Cross Problem Area

Naval Volunteers Cut Blood Bank Shortage

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Reporter

The Red Cross on Friday held one of the most successful donor clinics in Greater Victoria when 372 members of Maritime Command Pacific ships' crews attended donor clinics.

With the 372 pints collected on board HMCS Provider and the 130 donors who attended a clinic Thursday at Sanscha Hall, Sidney, the Red Cross during the past two days collected 502 pints, or roughly the requirement of Royal Jubilee Hospital for one month.

But there are about 70 hospitals in B.C. that need the blood of the Red Cross transfusion service to sustain the lives of many of their patients.

The magnitude of the blood collection and distribution program in B.C. is demonstrated by one figure — the 66,000 pints that were given at Red Cross donor clinics in B.C. last year.

The contribution from Greater Victoria during the past two days probably surpassed officials of the Red Cross blood transfusion service who have been trying almost every imaginable technique to collect blood from this area.

Many other Capital Region clinics have been less successful. For example, the clinics of last February at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, collected 77 and 134 pints, or a total of only 211 during the two days.

Last March, it was the same story — 63 and 155 pints, or a total of 218 during two days at Red Cross House.

In April, the Red Cross became desperate because a flu epidemic kept persons away from clinics on the lower Mainland.

The result was that it had no alternative but to make a shrimp public appeal to the citizens of Victoria who replied with 458 pints during two days of clinics.

But how quickly people forget. The two clinics at Red Cross House in Victoria during May brought only 184 pints.

That is how the response to the Red Cross donor clinics has been going in Greater Victoria for the past 20 years. No one can be certain what any given clinic will yield.

The only thing of which the Red Cross can be certain is the demand from Greater Victoria's hospitals for human blood. This runs to an average of 800 pints a month.

With patients in the area's hospitals needing 800 pints and the community giving between 400 and 600 pints each month at Red Cross House and mobile clinics, where do the other 200 to 400 pints come from?

John Rousseau, director of the Red Cross blood transfusion service for B.C., does not even have time to wonder. He simply has to find them elsewhere in B.C.

"I do not know what we can do in Victoria," he said in an interview in Vancouver this week. "We have volunteers and a part-time Red Cross worker who are trying very hard but sometimes they get very disappointed."

"Giving blood doesn't make anyone a hero and organizing a blood donor clinic isn't an act of heroism either," he says. "These are very pedestrian things but they are so important you can't begin to estimate the lives that have been saved."

"If one per cent of the population that we estimate is medical fit to give blood did so, we could easily fill our quota," says Rousseau.

Dr. T. D. Stout, medical director of the B.C. transfusion service, tends to be more impatient than is Rousseau with Greater Victoria. This is probably because he is the person who is called by hospitals when they want blood.

He admits that a year ago he might have lost his temper when he stated that some of the blame for the poor collections in Victoria must be assigned to the local Red Cross organization.

He was particularly critical of the turnout at clinics at Red Cross House and he hoped that the local Red Cross would try to do something about the parking problems in that area.

He says someone will have to do a lot of explaining for him to accept the fact that New Westminster, with a population of about 50,000 can find 250 donors a day while Greater Victoria, with its population of 200,000 can produce only between 100 and 150 donors at Red Cross House.

"I do not know what will be needed to instill some enthusiasm into your area," says Dr. Stout. "It has been one headache after another and the situation has been going from bad to worse."

He and Rousseau wondered whether the heart-lung surgery that is expected to be initiated at Royal Jubilee Hospital within a year might encourage more donations.

Each open heart operation at Vancouver General Hospital needs between 15 and 30 pints of blood that is less than one day old.

Dr. Charles Ballam, medical director of Royal Jubilee, says the hospital hasn't yet decided on the type of pump-oxygenator it will buy (this means it can't be stated how much blood will be needed to prime the equipment) but there is no question that more blood donors will have to be found.

"We might use a banking procedure, or we might use pools of donors — we can't say yet," he adds. "But when we start doing two or three open heart operations a week, we will have to have a very certain supply of fresh blood."

In addition to finding the donors, Stout and Rousseau have to contend with the rising costs of the blood transfusion service.

Last year, each pint issued by the Red Cross represented a cost of $8.59. Involved in that are the salaries of the team of nurses and drivers who attend the clinics, and the costs of many tests that are made of the blood when it arrives at the depot in Vancouver, storage and shipment to hospitals.

B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, the provincial government agency responsible for hospitals, grants the Red Cross blood transfusion service about $700,000 a year, or 85 per cent of its operating costs. The remainder comes from public donations.

At that point during the interview, Rousseau waved in the air his latest worry — an invoice that revealed that the price of the styrofoam cups, in which coffee is served to donors, had gone up.

"Therefore I have indicated another reason why we are so worried about the poor turnout at Victoria's clinics. Our fixed costs are the same whether we have 100 or 200 donors a day."

"When we go to Victoria, it often costs us twice as much to collect a pint of blood than it does anywhere else in the province."

World College Opens In Fall

An international college offering Grade 11 and 12 programs will likely open at Shawnigan Lake in the fall, although the arrangement may only be temporary, according to Bertram Butler, chairman of the United World Colleges' site committee.

Butler said Friday that Shawnigan Lake boys school has offered to share its buildings and its 162-acre site with UWC and the offer will be considered at a meeting Wednesday of the Canadian national committee.

He said he feels it is likely the committee will accept the Shawnigan Lake proposal if only on a temporary basis although "it doesn't quite fulfill the general specifications of the world college as I understand them."

He said, however, that although his committee has studied more than 50 sites both on Vancouver Island and in the Gulf Islands in the last two years there is nothing else specific in view at the moment.

Main advantage of the Shawnigan Lake site, said Butler, is that the college will be able to open there in September.

If it does open then it will take some 40 to 50 students, a few of them Canadians — but most of them from other countries.

The institution is to be called Pacific Rim College. Butler said that as far as possible enrollment in the school would be on a scholarship basis. "We want to ensure that this won't become just another special school for the children of very wealthy parents."

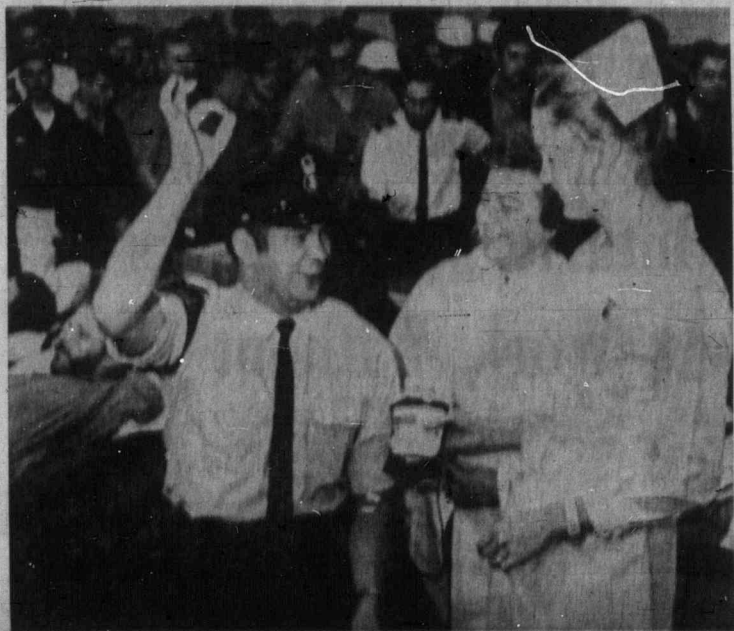

The provincial government in B.C. and other provinces and the Trades and Labor Congress were among the bodies that have given scholarships to the first UWC college which was established at St. Donat's Castle in Wales in 1962.

Butler said it was hoped that unions and various other organizations would agree to give scholarships to the new college when it is established to ensure that enrollment reflects a true cross-section of society.

At one time, Butler said, the UWC had hoped to open the school on defence department property at Pender Bay — but the department had turned down a request and the property is now being used as a firing range.

Attempted Murder Charge

New Bail Law May Free Man

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The new bail-reform sections of Canada's Criminal Code could mean a 43-year-old Port Alberni man once held on $20,000 bail on a charge of attempted murder may be released next Tuesday without any bail at all.

Judge William Ostler said Friday in Victoria Provincial Court the new sections apply to the case of Joseph McKenna, who was charged Dec. 3 with attempting to murder Leslie Edward Walsh, 30, in a shooting the day before in a CPR work-train car on a siding in the Colwood area.

The sections require a judge to release without bail any person charged with an offence less serious than murder, treason or sabotage unless the prosecutor can show cause why bail should be set or the person should remain in custody.

The judge is allowed to order one or more conditions from a lengthy list that ranges from staying in a certain area to putting up a big surety and Ostler decided in one case earlier this week that a $5,000 surety was required.

The main section is No. 457 and Ostler said Friday after McKenna was brought in from police cells: "We're back to Section 457 even though it's attempted murder" (meaning the charge).

He gave prosecutor John MacIntyre until Tuesday morning to obtain evidence so he can try to show cause for bail in McKenna's case.

The new sections went into effect Jan. 3, exactly a month after bail was set by Ostler at $20,000 for McKenna.

On Dec. 17, the judge reduced the bail to $11,000 at the request of defence lawyer Ted Pollard but McKenna was still in custody Friday because of inability to raise a surety that large.

Vancouver Fishing Boats Edged Out

Fleet May Make Victoria Home

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

The Victoria area could shortly become home base for a vastly enlarged fishing fleet if municipal governments are favorable to such a development.

That's the prospect held out by Dick Williams of Victoria Fishermen's Wharfrage and Harbor Committee, who said Friday that about 500 fishing boats are currently homeless or will become homeless as industrial encroachment in Vancouver and New Westminster area engulfs their berthing facilities.

"The town that puts in wharfrage facilities will get the fleet," Williams said in an interview.

New Westminster's newly-formed harbor commission was instrumental in closing down four docks on the North Arm of the Fraser River and the Gundersen Slough. The slough alone berthed 140 boats, he said.

Victoria's own fleet had grown its Erie Street wharves, and needed a new home in the immediate area if Greater Victoria was not to lose a valuable segment of its economy.

If the fleet was forced to move out, it would take with it the families, shore-based packing houses and the shipyard workers that service the fleet, along with the $2.25 million to $3.5 million of fish that is handled, shipped or sold each year.

"It is not as if we are seeking for any money," Williams said. "This is all available from the federal government when a suitable site for relocation has been selected."

What is needed now is an indication from all levels of government they would support the idea of having such a facility in the area, he emphasized.

Charles Brooks, transport department harbor and wharves administrator, has been working with the Victoria wharves committee tentatively for the past month, Williams said.

A final decision on relocation of the Victoria fishing wharves will be based on his report and should be made by late in March.

Two selections were being considered in the area, with Esquimalt Harbor in the running, and Sooke Harbor apparently favored by the transport department.

UVic Pays $80,000

Partridge Payment Called 'Realistic'

Chairman of the University of Victoria board of governors said Friday that an $80,000 settlement being given outgoing president Bruce Partridge is "realistic."

But the chairman, Lloyd McKenzie, said that concern of the board for what Partridge had been through in the past year affected the size of the settlement.

When Partridge resigned Nov. 16 he stated that his effectiveness had been "impaired by personal attacks."

In confirming the $80,000 settlement Friday, McKenzie said that, in his opinion, Partridge's career as a university president had been ruined.

"I wouldn't take the zapping he has taken, to use the contemporary word, for a million dollars," McKenzie said.

Being a university president is "one of the most difficult jobs in the contemporary world," the chairman said. "There are about 200 American universities without presidents and they can't find them. Nobody wants the job."

Speaking of the settlement, he said that "university presidents are very high-priced people and when their services come to an end the settlement usually has to be generous."

The $80,000 figure includes pension payments accumulated ed by Partridge at UVic, McKenzie explained, and it was based on a year's basic pay of $35,000 with other benefits. (Partridge's expense account amounted to almost $10,000 in 1970).

The president was on a five-to-seven-year contract, McKenzie said.

Dr. Charles Doyle, president of the Faculty Association, said "it seems a large amount of money but, considering the status of the position and the salary, it seems reasonable."

"As far as I am concerned, it's not a contentious issue in any way," he said.

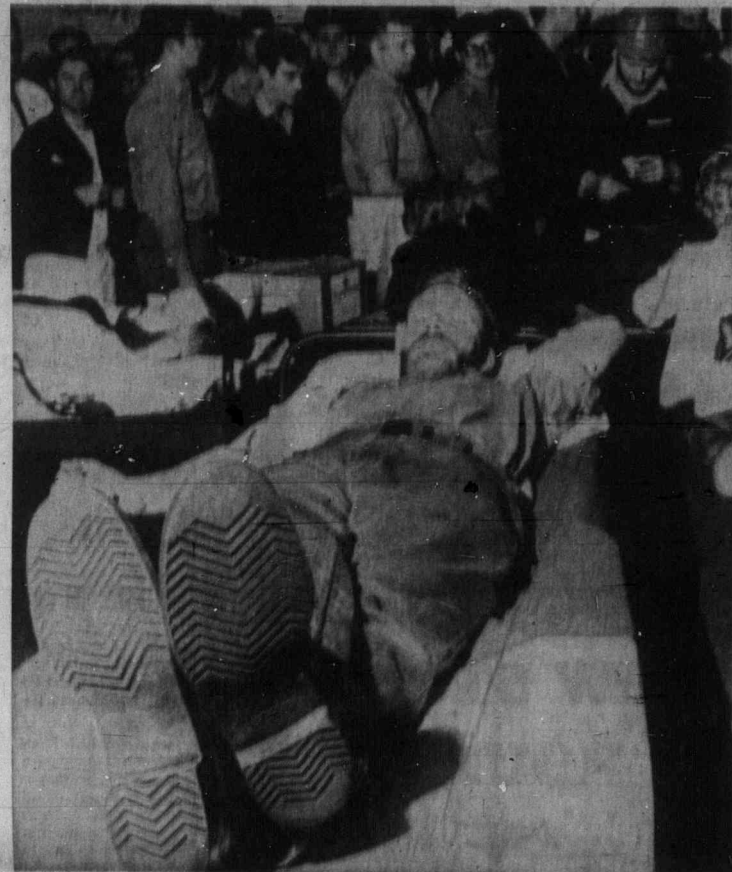

McKenzie was asked if the payment of the settlement would eat into the budget to such an extent that it could affect the hiring of teachers.

He replied that it would not affect the policy or the budget governing faculty members.

Partridge was appointed president in November, 1968, and took office in July, 1969. Since then the university has been embroiled in various disputes over non-renewal of contracts of some faculty members.

Flying Plywood Injures Man

Alex Patrook, of 1147 Quadra, was released from St. Joseph's Hospital Friday after he was treated for minor injuries received earlier in the day when he was hit by a sheet of flying plywood at Government and Pandora, Victoria police reported. Police said a gust of wind lifted the sheet from a load of plywood being carried by a truck. They said the plywood rebounded off a car and struck Patrook.

B.C. PARLOUR CAR TOURS

710 Douglas St.
385-4411

Raising the ante on tax levies for regional parkland acquisition would not prove to be popular with Greater Victoria's four major municipalities, the Colonist learned Friday.

Capital Regional Board chairman Hugh Curtis has suggested the increase from the present half mill levy, which raises about $20,000 annually, would be a solution to the tight purse strings on the region's capacity to buy parkland.

Dennis Young, executive board director, has said that the purchase of East Sooke Park, Thetis Cove, Witty's Lake acreage and Elk-Beaver Lake acreage has depleted the region's purchasing capacity for the year.

Curtis' suggestion might not find favor in Saanich since Ald. Ed Lum, Saanich parks chairman, said he felt that the half mill presently being levied was adequate.

"If any more money is to be allocated by council for parks it should be for our own park system — we are away behind in land acquisition here,"

"I am afraid we are trying to buy up lands for parks it will take us 300 years to develop," Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said.

"It seems we are all of a sudden aware of our environment. I think we should take a good look at our purchases, program them over a long period of time and extend our payments over as long a period as possible."

Pollen said the only merit in considering increasing the levy was the fact it would also increase the provincial participation. B.C. pays one-third of total land acquisition costs.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford was extremely doubtful her council would support any raise, "although if money were no object, it would be a wonderful idea."

Oak Bay has committed itself to some substantial expenditures under the federal government's local initiatives program, and the federal capital improvement loan program, Mayor Elford said. "And I would have to have our treasurer indicate where we have led ourselves with these programs."

The municipality is also committed for municipal salary increases and it starts bargaining late in March with police and firemen.

Esquimalt Mayor Arthur Young said he felt his council would want to hold back on any hike in the levy, since "we have lots of parks to acquire in our own area."

"Besides, we haven't even got Sooke's half mill yet. An increase might scare them off altogether."

Curtis was out of town for the weekend and unavailable for comment.

Mystery Motorist Surfaces

The story of the driver who was both Good Samaritan and law violator had a happy ending Friday at the Victoria police station.

The story began last Monday at Fort and Cook when a car hit a young girl. Its driver took the girl to hospital and stayed around until he was sure she was all right, but violated the law by failing to give anyone his name and address and failing to report an injury accident.

Wednesday, the Colonist published a short story in which police asked the man to come in to fill in the blanks and added charges were "not necessarily" being considered.

Friday, the man showed up, saying he read the story but had been ill. Like many other drivers, he had not realized accidents had to be reported even when the injuries are only bruises.

Police cautioned him about that and about the lack of name and address, then let him go.

Roundhouse Home

It may look like flying saucer or new architectural concept for churches, but unusual-appearing structure is wing for new home being built at 1346 Rockland. Peter Hartnell, 907 Royal Terrace, is having home built. Circular wing will contain lower floor living room, with bedrooms and bath on second floor.

Architect and Wife Beat Thieves

Sir Basil 'Has a Go'

LONDON (UPI) — Sir Basil Spence, 64-year-old dean of British architects and his wife, slugged it out with two burglars who invaded their home before dawn Friday — and sent them fleeing.

Sir Basil, nursing a sore face, foot and knuckles, told newsmen his 59-year-old wife Joan went at the burglars "like a terrier."

"My face is swelling up quite badly," the balding, bearded designer of Britain's ultra-modern Coventry Cathedral and other landmarks said. "But I know I gave as good as I got."

Sir Basil said he woke up in his Georgian-style home in North London's Islington district to find the two thieves, whom he described as in their 20's, going through the pockets of his hung-up suit.

"I flew at them and caught one of them in the face with my right. I must have hit him pretty hard, because his hat fell off and my knuckles are still hurting."

"One of them, who was very big indeed, jumped on my bare foot," Sir Basil said. He also took a punch in the face and his lip gushed blood.

"Then my wife, Joan, came racing in and went for them like a terrier. There was another scuffle between all of us."

Two young men — both of them had long hair — raced out of the room but got stuck in a cul-de-sac (dead-end passage) in the house.

"They came up to a blank wall, then flew past us and out of the house. They ran off like maniacs," Sir Basil said.

Afterward, Sir Basil said, he checked the house, armed with a long screwdriver. "I would have stuck it in them, too," he said.

The burglars got away with jewelry Sir Basil had given his wife for Christmas — a ring set with five diamonds and a turquoise pendant, he said. He estimated the haul was worth "only a few hundred pounds" — the main point is that they are of unique design."

"What I need now more than anything is a rest and so does my wife. We were both very frightened but neither of us regrets having a go at them," Sir Basil said.

Sir Basil's modernistic design for Coventry Cathedral, submitted in 1951, drew fire from conservative-minded critics for its departure from tradition.

Spence, the Royal Academy's professor of architecture, also designed the $7.8

million Knightsbridge Barracks facing Hyde Park in London. It houses the Household Cavalry. Among his other achievements were the new British Embassy in Rome and the British pavilion at the Montreal World's Fair in 1967.

Ontario Judge Balks At Work Without Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — Even prisoners must be paid for work they perform, says county court Judge Omer Chartrand.

Therefore, the federally-appointed judge said in an interview Friday, he cannot be expected to perform Ontario judicial duties for which he is not paid.

Judge Chartrand, who serves the Eastern Ontario counties of Prescott and Russell, is refusing to perform marriages, preside at small claims court sessions or deal with chamber matters involving provincial law.

The refusal is in protest of a recent $1,500 cut the Ontario government proposed in the $3,500 allowances it pays to the 97 county court judges in the province.

In the telephone interview from his Hawkesbury, Ont., home, Chartrand, 59, said that the Ontario allowance — in addition to a $25,000 salary from the federal government — is only for services provided in Surrogate Court.

That court deals with wills, estates, disputes between heirs and similar matters.

All other provincial judicial functions are performed without pay, the judge said. The salary cut was the last straw. In a Jan. 3 letter to Ontario Attorney-General Allan Lawrence, Chartrand said "work without pay offends the spirit of the provincial legislation relating to minimum and fair wage."

"The province should practise what it preaches and let force judges to be scarce, and if the province claims to force me to work for nothing, then it is discriminatory taxation and I refuse to pay it."

Will Define Objectives

Harbor Body Formed

Victoria area officials formed a committee Friday to define harbor development objectives.

The committee will later inform Ottawa as to the wishes of Greater Victoria regarding a harbor commission, if such commission is found by the committee to be desirable.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, Esquimalt Mayor Arthur Young, about 20 aldermen and others interested in harbor development attended the meeting, called by Victoria Chamber of Commerce and chaired by Ald. Clyde Savage, chairman of Victoria's harbor committee, in Victoria city hall.

Polien said later he felt the meeting would bear fruit "in working out a committee to get away from special interests that have been doing most of the pushing for harbor development."

The meeting empowered Polien and Savage to organize a committee for the study, which "will give Ottawa a clear-cut idea, for the first time, just where we want to go with our harbor."

Polien said he and Savage would look to Victoria, Esquimalt, chambers of commerce and Prof. Charles Forward of University of Victoria, whom he described as a "land use and port authority," in forming the committee.

New Director Appointed

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian University Service Overseas, the volunteer agency that has more than 1,200 Canadians serving in developing countries, has appointed a new Anglophone executive director.

He is John Gordon, 33, a native of St. Boniface, Man., who once worked as a journalist with the Winnipeg Free Press, the Winnipeg Tribune, the Ottawa Citizen and the CBC, and worked for two years as the principal planning economist for the government of Malawi in East Africa.

Unborn Rights Upheld

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuter) — The Privy Council in London, the highest appeal body in the Commonwealth, will be asked to rule on the legal rights of an unborn child.

The case results from an appeal against a Victorian state court decision that a driver must pay damages to four-year-old Sylvia Watt, born with brain damage and epilepsy after her pregnant mother was injured in a road accident in Victoria in May, 1967.

The Watt family, including three older children, who then lived in Melbourne, now live in Hailton, Scotland, near Aberdeen.

Mrs. Alexander Aitken Watt sued the driver, Hailton Rama, and was awarded $91,397 damages. When Sylvia's writ was issued through her father, Rama contended she had no right to sue.

But the Victorian state Supreme Court upheld her lawyer's submission that Rama "owed a duty of care" to Sylvia before she was born, ruling unanimously Dec. 14 that a child is entitled to damages before birth.

Chief Justice Sir Henry Winneke, however, granted Rama's lawyer, Barry Beach, permission to appeal to the Privy Council, saying the matters involved were of great public importance and there were no English or Australian judgments covering the precise matters involved.

"We are of the opinion that the matters are of great complexity and public importance, undoubtedly justifying a review of the decision by the highest tribunal in the hierarchy of our courts," the chief justice said.

Court Halts Abortions

NEW YORK (AP) — A state Supreme Court justice has signed a temporary restraining order to stop all abortions at municipal hospitals here, but the city said it would appeal immediately when the order is served to allow the abortions to continue.

Smouldering Upholstery Prompts Death Check

Colonist Newsday Service

NORTH PATHOGUE, L.I. — The fire here last July was not extensive. It was in a foam rubber couch in the living room. But heavy smoke and fumes billowed through the house, and Barbara Basile, 29, and her two children, Philip III, 6, and Mitchell, 2, choked to death.

"There wasn't that much actual damage," Brookhaven fire inspector Herb Davis recalled. "But the smoke was all through the house and all through their lungs, even in the stomach of the little girl."

The circumstances moved Davis to ask the federal government to impose standards on this kind of upholstery involving both natural and foam rubber and the artificial-foam compound, polyurethane. Thursday, two different actions were announced in that direction. Both cited the North Pathogue fire as a factor.

Victoria West, sometimes regarded as the community with the least going for it, is well on its way to becoming the community with the most.

First came a brand new elementary school, completed last summer after years of agitation.

Now the 3,000 or so residents have a neighborhood house, known variously to different age groups as the youth club, the day care centre, or the community centre.

Now the 3,000 or so residents have a neighborhood house, known variously to different age groups as the youth club, the day care centre, or the community centre.

A recent $15,000 federal grant for full-time staff for the centre has meant that various projects should be well off the ground by the end of May when the grant runs out.

"By then," says director Don MacDonald, "We hope we shall have proved the value of this and be able to get a further grant."

Although not officially open, the old house in Banfield Park is crowded with local residents all day, from 9 a.m. start to the after 10 p.m. closing.

First there is the pre-school class which is open every morning.

"We don't take very young children because of all the rules and regulations — we just don't have the room or the equipment," says worker Sharon Genge.

Her pet scheme at the moment, however, is getting young mothers to the centre, so she is organizing a nutrition and shopping course.

"And of course, we'll have to have someone to babysit the children so the young mothers can come."

Afternoons are set aside for adults, most of them pensioners.

Programs are being arranged for them following a potluck luncheon at which they listed requests — and it looks as though a keep-fit course will be the first item on that particular agenda.

Margaret Durrell helps Miss Genge with these adults, working on a shoestring budget and little equipment.

After 3 p.m. the small fry can move in.

Victoria West has the distinction of being the only area of town with a place where youngsters can drop in after school — a boon to working mothers whose children would otherwise go home to an empty house and several unsupervised hours.

Starting Monday there will be another area first in Vic West.

On that day the house will be closed between 6:30 and 7 p.m. to everyone but students.

University of Victoria students will provide tutoring for anyone, children or adult, who is studying.

Mrs. Durrell and Miss Genge have just finished dyeing a carpet and hanging drapes in a special study room, which will give students a place to either study or do homework alone, or with tutors.

"We won't have more than three students to a tutor and we'll have people to help with any subject," says MacDonald.

He is hoping that he will be able to get some donations of reference books and dictionaries for use at the centre.

Then, later, there is the youth club, with a program of handicrafts and Friday night movies.

The staff were taken by surprise Thursday night when a standing-room-only crowd of about 50 arrived for the start of a leatherwork program. "More equipment and smaller rooms are needed."

Snared by Secretary

I Missed That Radiant Glow

Dear Ann: Five years ago I met the man I had been waiting for all my life. We were the same age, neither of us had ever married. He was charming, intelligent, handsome, fun, and had a good job. People said we were the perfect couple. But he wasn't ready to settle down. Because I loved him, I was patient.

Suddenly, after two years, he announced that he was going to marry his secretary, a divorcee with two children. I learned they had been having an affair for years. She married at 18, was divorced three years later, went to work for my friend and chased him shamelessly. Finally she told him if he wouldn't marry her she would marry someone else. He fell for it.

The following year I married a widower with a young child. He was a wonderful man and we have a good marriage, but it lacks the radiant glow I once knew.

Last week I received a call from my ex-love. His marriage is a mess. He misses me. He made a horrible mistake. He'll leave her if I'll get a divorce and marry him. Of course I said no. But I die when I think of what we might have had together. I feel a deep bitterness toward a woman who would break up a relationship as perfect as ours. How can people be so rotten? — Denver

Dear Denver: I'm not pinning any good conduct medals on Miss Rotten but she didn't exactly knock your boyfriend in the head and carry him off. He chose her when he could have had you and don't forget it. I'm glad you had the good sense to tell him to get lost. I also have a sneaking suspicion that the man you married is by far the better of the two. Yes, even minus the "radiant glow."

Dear Ann Landers: For years I allowed my little pool to ride with me in the car — on the floorboard, or on the seat next to me. No problem — until yesterday. My daughter and I were going to the market and Muffy was on the floor, at her feet. My daughter moved suddenly and startled her. She jumped to my side of the car, right in front of the brake pedal. At that very moment we were approaching an intersection and the light was changing. I struggled to get my foot on the brake pedal but Muffy was in the way. I tried getting her with my hands, shoving her aside with my foot, but it was impossible. I finally yelled to my daughter to get her. She did — just in time. I ran the stop light and miraculously avoided slamming into another car. We stopped just short of jumping the curb. Never again will I let our dog sit on the floorboard. From now on she sits beside me or stays at home. — Learned My Lesson

Dear L.A. Your letter is a good reminder that pets can distract a driver. Thank you.

The Story

This is a fanciful story of an ageless existence in a perfect place. Three English citizens and one American are forced to land somewhere in Tibet. They found themselves in an enchanting valley of unsurpassed delight, a paradise where only happiness was found, and where time stood still. Nothing was there to do but eat and drink and never grow old. What a heaven!

Bruce Lowther

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Friday's answer — Phil Green turned Jew so he could write about being Jewish in the movie Gettysburg. Agreement, made 24 years ago and still pertinent to the times. Only, happily, not as much as it was then.

Today's question is more of the same, and you should only have to go back a couple of weeks to remember the movie of which this is the sequel — Gettysburg. U.S. post office helps a court decide the accused to fly off on a one-night job. The answer Tuesday.

"Turn the other cheek."

Saturday Highlights

C-12:00 noon — Mr. Chips is a new program about woodworking — 8.

C-8:00 p.m. — A 11 in the Family's Edith turns martini, and you'll never guess why — 7, 12.

C-10:00 — An ABC news special called Assault on Privacy is about eavesdropping by both government and business — 4.

Saturday Sport

RETURNS: NBA highlights start a new season at 2 p.m. on Channel 3. Pacific 8 basketball is at 2:30 (see below). The Pro Bowl's first game is at 4 p.m. on Channel 4 and the CBS Golf Classic is at 4 p.m. on Channel 12.

C-11:00 a.m. — The Senior Bowl, a college football all-star game — 5.

C-1:00 p.m. — The CBC starts a 13-week series on Canadian college sports with a basketball tournament — 2, 6.

C-1:00 — The Hula Bowl: more football all-stars — 4.

C-2:30 — The Los Angeles golf open — 7, 12.

C-2:30 — Pacific 8 basketball: USC at Oregon State — 5.

C-5:00 — NHL hockey, Philadelphia at Toronto — 2, 6.

C-10:00 — More college basketball, UCLA at Oregon — 11.

Saturday Movies

12:30 noon — Girl on the Run (poorish 1958 suspense). Efron Zimbalist. From the old 77 Sunset Strip series, and therefore Kookie — 11.

2:00 p.m. — Phunters of Painted Flats (1959 western). Don't that a great title? Pity the movie is so rotten — 11.

C-4:30 — Mozambique (1965 adventure). Steve Cochran. One of those let's go somewhere-and-make-a-cheapie movies — 5.

6:30 — Exile of Japan (1942), followed at 8 by Marked Men (1940). Somebody opened the doghouse, again — 13.

C-8:30 — The Astronaut (new futuristic romance drama). Susan Clark, Monte Markham, Robert Lansing, Jackie Cooper. Might be all right — 4.

C-8:30 — One-Eyed Jacks (1960 Brando western). Just a drag — 6.

C-9:00 — None But the Brave (1965 Sinatra wins the war). Phil Clut Walker, other victims but so unbelievable as to be almost a comedy — 2.

C-10:00 — Vanished (fairly good 1970 presidential drama). Richard Widmark, James Farentino, Arthur Hill, many more. Part one now and part two Monday — 5.

C-10:00 — Sex and the Single Girl (absolutely awful 1964 romantic comedy). Tony Curtis, Natalie Wood, Henry Fonda, Lauren Bacall. How to ruin a great idea — 12.

C-11:15 — Ferry to Hong Kong (so-so 1961 man without a country). Orson Welles, Curt Jurgens. A bit ponderous — 5.

C-11:15 — Attack of the Monster (1961 Japanese monster-horror). 7.

C-11:30 — The Trap (see 9:00) — 6.

11:30 — Situation Hopeless But Not Serious (1965 war tragedy). Guinness, Robert Redford. It could have been much better — 8.

11:30 — Decision Before Dawn (still great 1952 war drama). Oskar Werner, Richard Basehart. Two fine talents at their peaks — 12.

C-11:45 — Don't Go Near the Water (1957 war-funny). Glenn Ford, Anne Francis. One of many navy-life comedies that sink — 4.

C-12:15 — Fireball (1966 Italian spy thriller). Ignore it — 2.

Saturday Radio

2:00 p.m. — The Metopora is Samson and Delilah by Saint-Saens, featuring Grace Bumbry and James McCreckin — CBU (990).

6:00 — NHL hockey, Vancouver at Minnesota — KICW (980).

7:00 — Symphony Hall: the Prague Radio-Symphony Orchestra — CBU.

9:00 — Recommended; C — Color.

Library 'Mixup' Cleared

Greater Victoria Public Library director Donald Miller said Friday that he has re-arranged the monthly statements so they will reflect more clearly the financial operation.

Miller said he was a little unhappy with a newspaper account of the last board meeting which categorized simple "budget mixup."

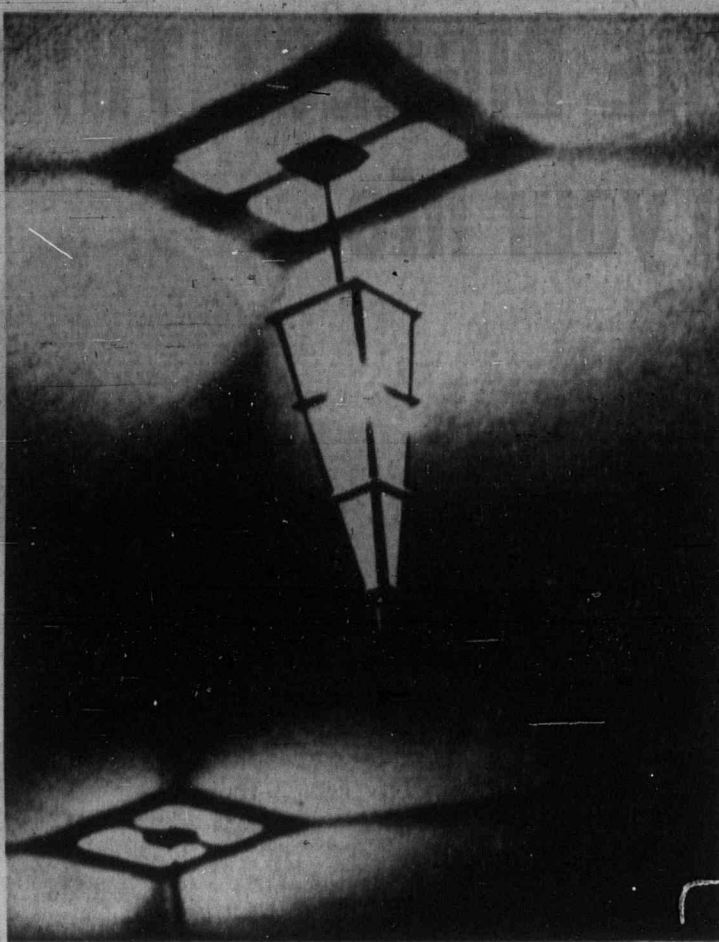

"I had to do a bit of talking to the city," he said, referring to the Victoria accounting department which does the accounting for the library.

"We were reporting provincial grants in a separate section," Miller said.

"Now they have been incorporated with the operational report."

He denied the statement, attributed to him in a newspaper report of the last library board meeting, that he would have a new system next year and that he hoped to add new accounting equipment which would speed procedures up.

"The city does our accounting, and they do it exactly as we ask. The only change will be the different method of reporting the monthly reports."

Lighting Up the Past

Museums are known for exhibits of archeology, biology, natural history, anthropology and history, but they can provide settings for artistic lighting displays as well.

Near-Epidemic Concerns Police

'Drugs Behind Break-Ins'

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The break-in problem in Greater Victoria, which caused two police forces to issue official warnings Thursday, is becoming so bad it seems almost like an epidemic.

The warnings were voiced Thursday afternoon by police in Victoria and Oak Bay and Victoria police disclosed Friday there were eight more house break-ins in the city Thursday evening.

That makes the total number of break-ins in Victoria 47 in the first six days of this year, with 33 of them in homes.

Those figures are big increases from 1970, where there were 12 house break-ins and 17 others for a total of 29 in the first six days, and from 1971, when the first six days produced 20 break-ins, of which none took place in homes.

In all of January, 1970, the break-in total in Victoria was 99 while the total for January of last year was 124. If the trend this month continues, there will be 243 break-ins in Victoria between Jan. 1 and Feb. 1 — an increase of nearly 100 per cent in a year.

Police said the trend began to appear during the year-end holiday and the break-in problem has been noted in Saanich, Esquimalt and Colwood as well.

They believe the persons responsible are either juveniles or narcotics users rather than "professional" criminals of adult age.

In the worst of the eight break-ins late Thursday, $438 in cash was stolen at 306 Davida. Taken in other break-ins were: $269 cash at 1608 Pembroke, $68 at 2941 Prior, $9 from an apartment at 1251 Pandora and food from an apartment refrigerator at 131 Clarence. Nothing was taken in break-ins at 2820 Gosworth, 2993 Cedar Hill and 3003 Cedar Hill.

That means a total of almost $2,000 in cash and goods was taken from 23 residences and 14 businesses in Victoria in six days, with the northeast section of the city being hit hardest.

Friday, police repeated the best way to discourage break-ins — When a homeowner goes out, the home should not look empty but should have one or more lights on and maybe a radio, too. And the neighbors should be asked to call police if they see anyone suspicious around the empty home.

Pickets Protest Cheques They Couldn't Cash

Pickets were in action Friday morning on a 73-unit townhouse development at 2827 Gordon Head Road in a dispute over pay cheques which workmen said they were unable to cash.

Work on the construction site ceased when other union workers refused to cross the picket line on the $900,000 project.

The action of the 12 carpenters and four laborers was directed at Inter-Island Construction Ltd., framing subcontractor on the project being built by Stuart Developments Ltd.

In a prepared statement Stuart Developments said it has performed its contract with Inter-Island Construction Ltd. and all payments due under this contract have been made in accordance with the terms of the contract. There are no payments due to Inter-Island Construction Ltd. at this time, it said.

The statement stressed the picket line is unlawful and the grievance is against Inter-Island Construction Ltd. and not Stuart Developments Ltd.

"We have co-operated with the union in the past and have assured them of our co-operation in their present circumstances."

The statement noted that on two different occasions Stuart Developments had brought pressure to bear on the pickets' employer to pay monies due to their union.

Victoria Orchestra May Play in Ottawa

There is a good possibility of an appearance at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra during the 1973-74 season.

This was confirmed yesterday by symphony conductor Laszlo Gati.

Gati pointed out that Winnipeg symphony performed at the centre recently and policy was to bring in one orchestra each season.

Gati said Hugh Davidson, music administrator for the centre, was very impressed when he heard tapes made by the orchestra while on a visit to Victoria recently. He was particularly delighted with the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, originally played at the 1971 Centennial concert.

Gati said that a large part of the Feb. 27-28 program is to be taped by the CBC for later national broadcast.

13,905 Jews Quit Russia

MOSCOW (LAT) — A total of 13,905 Soviet Jews emigrated to Israel during 1971, with an accelerating rate of departure during the final quarter that seems to be continuing into the new year, reliable sources reported Tuesday.

The number, however, represents only a small fraction of the Soviet Union's 2.2 million Jews. The number of Soviet Jews who wish to emigrate is not known.

Drug Worker Won't Quit

Society Homeless

Pacific Drug Dependency Society is not folding even though it is being forced to close Bridge House, its rehabilitation residence at 1354 Pandora, organizer Bill Ogston said Friday.

Bridge House is being closed due to lack of provincial government support and because the rent has been raised from $300 to $650 a month, Ogston said.

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglard's department has had an application for support for a year, he added.

The society will still function "in whatever capacity it can," Ogston continued.

"But for us, residential rehabilitation is out for the present. My feeling is that to get back into residential care we will have to be a well-organized, government-supported, properly-equipped residence or building, so that we can function in the manner we are supposed to."

Ogston said he would remain active in the field of drug dependency and alcoholism "in any way in which I can fit in."

"It appears it will be limited now to counselling and education. I imagine there is some organization that might be able to make use of me. I've no intention of getting out of the field and I will continue to seek government support."

The society in its year at Bridge House has given resdential help to almost 300 persons and has also helped about 75 non-residents, in addition to handling countless phone calls from concerned parents as well as drug addicts, Ogston said.

A former alcoholic, Ogston said he had been in this type of work for the past three years. He has had no formal training, he said.

"But I've had other, informal training," he added, "and what's more important, I've been where a lot of these people are now."

Oak Bay Seniors' Activity Plans Laid

Physical fitness programs, culture and recreation are all scheduled for the Oak Bay seniors' centre at 1442 Monterey which opens Friday with a friendship program from 12:30 - 4 p.m.

Daily programs will be provided for adults at the centre from 10 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., beginning Monday, Jan. 17, under the auspices of Oak Bay recreation commission and special evening programs may be arranged, such as Tuesday night bridge starting Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m.

A special physical fitness program led by Mrs. W. E. Mitchell starts Thursday, Jan. 20, 10:30 - 11:30 a.m. with Mrs. Lalma Bariman as piano accompanist.

Sketching, water coloring and batik classes are available, and pre-school classes are being prepared.

Persons interested in any activities may obtain information at 592-2484 or the recreation office at 598-3311.

Train Crash

VALLADOLID, Spain (UPI) — At least four persons were killed and about 100 injured Friday when two commuter trains collided near Medina Del Campo station near here, police reported.

M.V. Chesnut Best for Sale

In their annual New Year honors list, the All-America Selections Committee has awarded a silver medal and three bronze medals to four new flower seeds of which will be offered in the 1972 catalogues.

The new aristocrats among flowers are Carved Ivory, a very large zinnia; Gold Galore, a semi-double gold marigold; a double petunia in salmon and white called Circus, and a vigorous new hybrid hollyhock to be named Summer Carnival.

The All-America Selections Committee was organized by seedsmen to act as a screening and testing agency for home gardeners, operating a network of test gardens at universities and research centres in all the different climate zones throughout North America.

Any breeder or hybridizer of a new flower or vegetable can submit seeds of his brainchild for testing. These are grown at 30 widely differing test gardens in the United States and Canada. Each of these must compete against the most popular varieties in its class, and to win an All-America Award it must be voted markedly superior to all the older kinds.

According to the judges' reports, the new zinnia Carved Ivory, winner of the silver medal, stood out among the other zinnias for its large, double, ivory-colored bloom. Its clarity of color, in particular, gives it an unmistakable look of quality, and makes a grand contrast with the dark green foliage. Individual blooms are 5 inches across, with narrow, twisted petals, making an airy, informally shaggy flower, especially good for flower arrangements.

The new zinnia is a first-generation hybrid, so the plants themselves are uniform, vigorous and productive, standing 2 1/2 feet tall.

Bronze medal winner Gold Galore is a first-generation hybrid hedge-type marigold standing about 14 inches tall. Each plant may have as many as 25 blooms open at one time, and the flowers are large, full and of a rich golden-orange shade. As with most F1 hybrid plants, these marigolds are outstanding in vigor and uniformity -- as alike as peas in a pod -- and so well suited for bedding en masse. And, like most of the recently developed marigold strains, they keep on blooming all summer long and are seldom bothered by pests.

This year's petunia winner, Circus, has very large and fully double blooms in salmon and white. Each petal is a deep salmon shade toward the centre and white on the outside, and as the petals overlap, they create a most interesting effect in the individual flower.

The plants come into bloom fairly early in the season, and the flowers are uniformly distributed over the plant, which makes Circus a very good choice either as a patio plant in an ornamental pot or in mass planting for overall effect. Incidentally, the plant itself is more compact and less sprawling than most of the double petunias, making a mound about 14 inches tall and 20 inches across.

The fourth All-America flower winner for 1972 is the hollyhock Summer Carnival, awarded a bronze medal. This one, while relatively perennial, will bloom the first year from seed. The plants are sturdy, 5 to 6 feet tall, excellent as a garden background plant or against a fence or wall.

Summer Carnival has attractive large flowers. The centres are fully double with a single row of guard petals framing the frilly centre. The color range is the widest yet found in any strain of hollyhocks, and includes scarlet, deep rose, pink, yellow and white.

In one popular seed catalogue, seeds of the Summer Carnival hollyhocks are listed at 65 cents per packet, the marigold Gold Galore at 75 cents, the petunia Circus at $1.50 and the zinnia Carved Ivory at $1 for a packet of 35 seeds.

Sydney Harris Scorers Can't Lead

I feel impelled to answer a reader who is wondering why he seems to have come to a dead-end in his job.

This man writes that he has been considered a "driver" and a "leader" by his company; he saved his department from disaster a few days ago; and won an executive promotion, but since then has been passed over twice.

"I'm getting a little paranoid on the subject," he confesses, "and wonder if there's a corporate conspiracy to keep me where I am in perpetuity."

Not knowing the man, or the company, I can't assess the truth of the situation; but it is common enough so that a few generalizations known by industrial psychologists can be applied here.

In the first place, the same man is rarely a "driver" and a "leader." The qualities that make a man compete hard as an individual against other individuals are often militate against him when he is given the job of running a team.

This is why so comparatively few of the finest athletes turn into successful managers; and, conversely, why so many of the best managers (or coaches) were little more than mediocre players.

The talented, hard-driving, individualistic "player," who is supremely able to focus his own power, often becomes destructive when he is asked to delegate power, to spread responsibility as well as take it, to rebuild or heal an ailing team.

The dynamics that made him such a splendid competitor now operate against his leadership role -- which is to inspire and not to dominate, to give credit as much as to demand it.

And this disparity of roles explains why so many "hot shot" producers for a company turn cold when the signals are changed and they are asked to lead rather than to drive.

Now the total personality is engaged -- not just the competitive spirit -- and it is the influence of the total personality that determines if a man succeeds in a broad executive role.

Drive is not enough (it may be actually hurtful). Intelligence is not enough (cold intelligence divorced from compassion is the surest way to demoralize an organization) and there technical expertise is by no means enough (the technical expert is most of all prone to forget he is dealing with living people and not with unfeeling abstractions).

No one yet knows what combination of "mix" of qualities makes for the best administrators or executives; and all tests which pretend to "evaluate" such candidates are presumptions or downright fraudulent.

At the most, we have some negative correlations which indicate that the man who loves to score the touchdown doesn't gracefully relinquish the ball to somebody else.

Veterans Busy

MARILYN BECK

The senior citizens circle continues to find a renaissance or work opportunities like movies for TV. On the January 29 airing of Screaming Woman, you'll see yesterday's matinee idols Joseph Cotton, Walter Pidgeon and Olivia de Havilland, all of them happy to be before the cameras, though they no longer command the pay or attention they once enjoyed.

The day I visited the ABC set, Pidgeon and Cotton were discussing the fact that the younger faces in town are snapping up what little acting assignments are available. "I have to go to Europe to get work," Joseph said philosophically. And Walter told him not to feel especially put upon in that respect, "I can hardly get a job anywhere!"

The 73-year-old Pidgeon has recently been signed to the big-screen Airborne cast, but most of his work these days comes from once-in-a-while TV series guest-shot assignments. Still regarded as one of the finest actors about, once considered among the top box-office draws, Walter was under contract to MGM for 21 years and recently returned to that lot to support young and handsome Chad Everett in a segment of Chad's popular Medical Centre series.

Carrie Snodgrass is under Universal contract but she isn't too happy about that fact. The young actress, who decided stardom wasn't all it was cracked up to be after hitting it big in Diary of a Mad Housewife, is allowing her attorneys to battle out her current differences with the studio while she travels here, there, most everywhere, with her man Neil Young. And with the coin Young is making as a top rock star, Carrie doesn't have to worry about paying the bills. He can afford to take care of her. And does.

Twigg and her The Boyfriend co-star, Tommy Tune, are back in London again, hoofing it up during rehearsals of their upcoming, Gotta Sing, Gotta Dance. While he is in Hollywood, Tommy told me he fell in love with Blighly and his high-livin' ways. Which surprised even him, because he has to be the gentlest, shyest fellow who ever danced his way out of Houston, Texas. He had been about to take the reins as choreographer of the Dean Martin Show last winter when Ken Russell offered him the Boyfriend lead.

Universal is moving into high gear with their Richard Jaeckel-for-an-Oscar campaign. Sometimes a Great Notion, the Paul Newman-starrer in which Jaeckel is featured, has opened to some four-star reviews for Richard. He is understandably flattered by the reaction. "In fact," he said, "just being cast in the role of an affable God-fearing family man was award enough for me. It was a welcome change of pace."

Jaeckel's disturbed that for years he's been cast in the mould of a cinema heavy. "Because we have a very unpleasant thing in Hollywood called type casting. It's a result of laziness on the part of casting directors and producers who don't use their imaginations to picture an actor in something other than the roles he's played."

He revealed the only reason he broke out of the mold in "Notion" was because Paul Newman spotted him at the beach one day. "Playing football and kidding around with some kids. He had the foresight to picture me as something besides a psychopathic killer and approached me about the film that same afternoon."

Kitchen Focal Point

Says STAN DELAPLANE

Misty, misty days around our scatter. Hardly a place to find shelter except under an occasional dry martini. We make them in the kitchen.

Do you realize, citizens, that most people eat and drink in the kitchen? It is one of the wonders of our wonderful times. The dining room is like man's appendix -- it's there, but you hardly know it until it gives you trouble.

This was revealed by the furniture people. Furniture people study these trends and then "reveal" them through newspapers. This is a revealing business.

Anyway, they made a study and found nearly everybody eats in the kitchen.

A whole lot of people do a little social drinking alongside the sink, too.

You know, the couple you invited for dinner drop in. The lady of the manor says: "What would you like to drink? Will you make it, Joe?"

Joe drifts to the kitchen. His male guest trails, saying: "Anything I can do to help?"

They shake up a pair of hookbushers on the cutting board. And away they go for the evening.

"It may be," says the furniture study group. "That trend to the kitchen is subtly encouraged by the woman of the house. It saves housework. Prevents glass rings on the good furniture. And the modern kitchen, with counters and recessed ovens, is quite an attractive and cozy room."

My own kitchen is pretty cozy at that.

I keep the gloves (for hot buttered yams) just behind the sugar. So when I am juggling a hot glass and reaching for the cloves, I usually spill sugar all over the floor.

There is nothing sweeter than a floor covered with sugar. It makes a cozy, crunching sound underfoot.

So what else is new in the house? An intelligent question and we have a daffy answer. (Not mine. I simply reveal.)

The American housewife would like a bathtub that can be raised and lowered. Housewives complain that it is hard to get in and out of low tubs.

They also say they have to get down on hands and knees to bathe the baby.

They want somebody to put an elevator in the bath.

Going tip! Step back in the tub, please.

We bathed our babies in the sink. A masterful piece of efficiency combined hygiene and our social life. But apparently many housewives mop off their moppets in the tub. Not only a back-breaker, but dangerous.

What else do our housewives want, bless their hearts? They want to eat in the kitchen. But they would like to have a formal dining room -- "to teach the children better manners."

It seems to me, children bathed in the sink while the guests are socializing, have a great opportunity to learn manners.

If you interview ladies of the households, you will find that they DREAM they want to eat in the kitchen. They will scream to high heavens that they want to eat in all the formal manners of the most formal dining rooms.

However, visiting friends where there ARE formal dining rooms, I seldom find anybody in them. The housewife says brightly: "I just thought we'd have a light buffet to night. It seems so much more cozy."

The dining room was there, and they were glad to have it. It fulfilled a large need. But it doesn't function. It just sits there.

Surveys of mine are inconclusive because when I ask typical homemakers, they swear that they are using the formal dining room practically all the time.

And when you get one of these things started in the typical home, you wish you hadn't.

Bank Bombs Shake Police

Cleverly-fashioned time bombs were removed safely Friday from banks in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, where they were planted months ago in an ominous demonstration of a plot to free "all political prisoners."

At least one of the devices was planted in each of the three great United States financial centres—Wall Street in New York, LaSalle Street in Chicago and Montgomery Street in San Francisco.

Planted Six Months Ago

Eight explosive devices in as many banks were found and dismantled upon directions of the bomber or bombers, who sent anonymous letters listing their locations. The letters said the bombs were planted in safe-deposit boxes six months ago.

A ninth bomb in San Francisco's Bank of America apparently exploded prematurely last September, causing only minor damage.

For nearly 10 hours after the handwritten, special delivery warning letters were received during the night in Chicago and San Francisco, tension mounted among authorities from coast to coast as they sweated out removal of the bombs.

In all three cities, it was necessary to wait until well after dawn Friday for time locks to expire and open the banks' massive vault doors.

In four cases, the letter-writer mailed keys to the safe-deposit boxes where the bombs were deposited. In the others, specialists had to drill open the boxes, since the bank's key would not work alone in the absence of the depositor's key.

Okinawa Return Speeded By Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon has agreed in summit talks with Premier Eisaku Sato of Japan to return Okinawa to Japanese control May 15, about six weeks earlier than the United States wanted.

to return Okinawa to Japan a substantial progress towards improving economic

The two leaders also reported substantial progress towards improving economic ties strained by Japanese trade barriers. And they agreed to establish a "hot line" between Washington and Tokyo to improve high-level communications between the two major Pacific powers.

U.S. officials had pressed for major concessions in lowering trade barriers and other restrictions which have led to a $3-billion annual deficit in U.S. trade with Japan.

Sources said these concessions were the price for an early return of the now-populous Second World War island of Okinawa to Japanese control.

As he bade farewell to the Japanese premier, Nixon said the "far-ranging and very comprehensive discussions" disclosed "a natural interdependence between Japan and the United States."

During a news conference, Sato acknowledged he had not asked Nixon to visit Japan because of the fear of demonstration against the American leader.

He also told reporters:

● Japan will not intervene to defend the security of Taiwan or South Korea but the United States will be able to do so from Japanese bases, on the condition that it sends its forces to trouble spots indirectly.

● Though U.S. bases will remain on Okinawa, the U.S. has been asked to reduce its facilities there as much as possible.

● Not only nuclear weapons, but also chemical and biological weapons will be removed from Okinawa.

'Only Bennett Can Do It'

Gas Bidders Demand Clear Rules

VANCOUVER (CP)—The presidents of two companies competing for approval to build a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island from the mainland want clarification—and soon—of the rules affecting the competition.

Ron Rutherford, president of Pacific Northern Gas, says he can't see how the applicants could go ahead if the clarification isn't made by Jan. 18, date of the next meeting between applicants and the Public Utilities Commission.

Their statements followed word from Gordon Shrum, chairman of B.C. Hydro, that Hydro could build a pipeline to the Island without PUC approval and would — if it chooses — have distribution rights on the Island for gas from any pipeline.

Meantime, Resources Minister Ray Williston, also a Hydro director, said Thursday the position is that Hydro will distribute in Greater Victoria and also in economically feasible areas the successful pipeline company does not wish to serve itself.

The two pipeline presidents said there are many important differences between the two statements.

Bailey said Shrum's statement on distribution, combined with statements made by him earlier to the commission, means that, not only have the rules for building the pipeline been changed, but

Leak in High Places Not So Bad After All

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Mrs. William Rogers, wife of the secretary of state, said at a recent luncheon that her husband is briefed by an aide every morning on events that transpired around the world during the night.

Her husband once urged his aide to report some good news for a change. "There's no good news, sir, but there's some bad news that's not our fault," the aide said. "The Aswan Dam is leaking."

Mujib Returns To Bangladesh

Sheikh Mujib ... in Dacca

NEW DELHI (AP)—Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has been released and has flown to Dacca, capital of Bangladesh, Pakistan radio announced today. President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto saw the sheik off at the airport when the Bengali leader returned to his home, the station said.

The plane left early this morning Pakistan time, it said.

In a Bengali broadcast heard here, the radio quoted an official Pakistani spokesman as saying Bhutto did not want to impose his will on the sheik since Mujib is the leader of "East Pakistan."

The radio did not say whether Bhutto and Mujib held a final round of talks before the sheik left.

Bhutto last Monday promised to release the sheik after one more round of talks, which were begun shortly after Bhutto took over power from former president Yahya Khan.

Bhutto is actually a house host and McCoy of 740 Evergreen reported it missing from West Thurlow Island this week where it had been moored on floats in the water.

Home Stolen

CAMPBELL RIVER — Someone has made off with James McCoy's home and so far Campbell River RCMP have drawn a blank. The home is actually a house boat and McCoy of 740 Evergreen reported it missing from West Thurlow Island this week where it had been moored on floats in the water.

Spanish Jet Crash Kills 104

IBIZA, Balearic Islands (AP) — A Spanish airliner coming down through fog for a landing smashed into a 1,000-foot peak on this Spanish Mediterranean island Friday. Officials said all 104 aboard the twin-jet Caravelle died.

Rescue squads found debris and bodies scattered over a wide area but no survivors shortly after the Iberia Airlines plane dropped out of the clouds and slammed into the mountain.

Most of the passengers were Spaniards. Many were travelling to the resort island from the southern city of Valencia.

A spokesman for the airline said two men — Jeff Desk of New York City and a Mr. Fricker from West Germany — were believed to be the only foreigners among the 98 passengers and six crew members.

The crash was the worst in Iberia's history but not the worst in Spain. Eighteen months ago a British Dan-Air charter jet crashed near Barcelona killing 185 persons.

Iberia's worst previous crash was March 31, 1965, when one of its planes crashed off Tangier with a loss of 50 lives.

The Iberia flight was en route from Madrid to Ibiza, a favorite summer place for hippies, with a stop in Valencia.

The plane crashed about five miles from the Ibiza airport, one of the busiest in Spain during the peak of the summer holiday season.

Cholera Threat

GENEVA (UPI) — Europe can expect a further invasion of cholera this year, the World Health Organization said Friday.

Last year there were cases in Algeria, Morocco, Portugal and Spain and isolated cases in France, West Germany, Sweden and Britain. Altogether, 40 countries reported 158,000 cases and 23,000 deaths.

Husband Dies of Cold, Wife Feeds Baby Snow

RAWLINS, Wyo. (UPI) — A Rawlins woman stranded four days in a blizzard Friday said she burned floor mats to keep warm and melted snow to feed her 18-month-old baby while waiting rescue by persons she thought her husband would find.

The husband, Johnny Montano, 25, had frozen to death about eight miles from where he left his family in the temperature that ranged from 31 to 50 degrees below zero.

A search party Thursday found Mrs. Consuelo Montano and her daughter Melissa conscious but suffering from frostbite and exposure. A short time later they found Montano's body.

The incident occurred about 17 miles southwest of Rawlins.

"They had gone out rabbit hunting New Year's Day and the truck got stuck," said a spokesman for the Carbon County sheriff's office. "He (Montano) left about midnight Sunday to get aid for his wife and child. He made it about six miles and lit a fire and we found him about two miles from there."

"He was just a half-mile from a railroad section house that had people living in it who could have helped him."

Montano had set out dressed only in jeans, shirt, boots and jacket.

"He had a child's hat wrapped around his face, for warmth," said the spokesman.

Officials said Mrs. Montano burned floor mats and anything else she could find to keep warm after using up all of the truck's gas to keep the heater running.

Charles Martinez, her brother, said when he and his companions first found the truck, Mrs. Montano was partially delirious from the cold and lack of food.

"She said the baby kept crying for daddy and food and so she would go out and get some snow and feed that to her," he explained. He added Mrs. Montano felt her husband was dead even before being told his body had been found.

Compensation Fees Next Target

Colonist Reporter

An official of the B.C. Medical Association said Friday that once the current dispute with the provincial government is settled doctors will review their Workmen's Compensation Board fees.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the BCMA, said the schedule of fees under which doctors bill the Workmen's Compensation Board is badly in need of updating.

"We will get to that as soon as the present situation is cleared up," he added.

The fee schedule that applies to the WCB is similar to that which doctors use for their medicare billings.

Last year, B.C.'s doctors collected $2.7 million from the compensation board. By way of comparison, their total gross medicare earnings were $128.1 million.

The $2.7 million that the compensation board paid out to doctors was among the $8.8 million that the WCB spent on medical services to injured workers.

Of that total, B.C. Hospital

Insurance Service, the government agency responsible for hospitals, got about $4 million.

All of WCB's costs are assessed to employers.

The B.C. Medical Association is awaiting word from the provincial government as to whether it will satisfy medicure billings made under a schedule of minimum fees that went into effect Jan. 1.

The only offer made by the government has been a 10 per cent "global" increase in the cost of medicare. This would include all the factors contributing to medicare's total costs. The portion that would go to fee increases would depend on the control of utilization, new services and so on.

Pacific Rim College Likely for Shawnigan

An international college offering Grade 11 and 12 programs will likely open at Shawnigan Lake in the fall, although the arrangement may only be temporary, according to Hertram Butler, chairman of the United World Colleges' site committee.

Butler said Friday that Shawnigan Lake boys school has offered to share its buildings and its 162-acre site with UWC and the offer will be considered at a meeting Wednesday of the Canadian national committee.

He said he feels it is likely the committee will accept the Shawnigan Lake proposal if only on a temporary basis although "it doesn't quite fulfill the general specifications of the world college as I understand them."

World School May Open in Fall

He said, however, that although his committee has studied more than 50 sites both on Vancouver Island and in the Gulf Islands in the last two years there is nothing else specific in view at the moment.

Main advantage of the Shawnigan Lake site, said Butler, is that the college will be able to open there in September.

If it does open then it will take some 40 to 50 students, a few of them Canadians—but most of them from other countries.

The institution is to be called Pacific Rim College.

Butler said that as far as possible enrolment in the school would be on a scholarship basis. "We want to ensure that this won't become just another special school for the children of very wealthy parents."

The provincial government in B.C. and other provinces and the Trades and Labor Congress were among the bodies that have given scholarships to the first UCW college which was established at St. Donat's Castle in Wales in 1962.

Butler said it was hoped that unions and various other organizations would agree to give scholarships to the new college when it is established to ensure that enrolment reflects a true cross section of society.

At one time, Butler said, the UCW had hoped to open the school on defence department property at Peddar Bay—but the department had turned down a request and the property is now being used as a firing range.

Forde Hits Rough Water Over Committee Abolition

JOHN JACKSON
Colonist Correspondent
CAMPBELL RIVER — By their actions at a special meeting earlier this week Campbell River aldermen have served notice on Mayor Ken Forde that his second year in office may be a difficult one.

The mayor said early in the new year that all two and three-man committees had been abolished in favor of administration by the council as a whole.

Forde made his decision sufficient participation by council in the business of the municipality and too much is being carried on by committee will be done as a council as a whole.

The mayor's decision was attacked by re-elected Ald. Blair McLean who asked for further discussion at a subsequent meeting.

Forde however stuck by his guns saying, "It is my prerogative to make the decision on the appointment of committees."

The mayor's selection of persons to sit on the court of revision was also shot down by aldermen. Forde suggested five businessmen but aldermen protested that "there should be ordinary taxpayers on the court. The council then agreed that each alderman would submit a name and the court of revision be made up that way.

A final indication of the Forde recommendation that he be appointed to the Comox-Strathcona Regional Board.

Again his council objected and instead named former mayor and recently appointed Ald. Ken McDonald to represent the municipality. McDonald sat on the regional board for the two years he served as mayor of Campbell River.

Company Seeks Restraining Order

Fallers Interference Cited

PORT ALBERNI — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. Friday applied to the B.C. Supreme Court for an order restraining fallers at the company's Franklin River division from interfering with production.

The step followed action by 34 fallers at the Franklin River logging operation which the company said has denied work to unemployed members of their own union, the International Woodworkers of America.

G. J. Towill, MacMillan Bloedel director of labor relations, said in a statement that the company's log production has been drastically curtailed by a series of slowdowns and wildcat strikes by the fallers.

This has already resulted in loss of employment for more than 75 employees at Franklin River division and is threatening the jobs of hundreds of mill workers in Port Alberni, he said.

However, union sources dispute the interference claim.

John Squire, secretary-treasurer of Local 1-85 of the IWA said a meeting to discuss the issue has been arranged with the Franklin River fallers crew for Monday night.

This was the soonest the union could get to talk to the men as the camp was closed Friday because of heavy snow.

Squire said there had been problems at Franklin River over fluctuation in crew size and the crews have claimed that more adequate planning by the company would mean less variation in the number of men employed.

Firemen, Police Watch As Bungalow Guttled

LADYSMITH — As firefighters, police and neighbors helplessly stood by, a fire swept through an old bungalow style home near Ladysmith Friday night and left only the chimney standing.

RCMP said the blaze occurred on Saltair Station Road off Highway 1A between Ladysmith and Chemainus. The house was located in an unorganized area without fire protection.

RCMP identified members of the family as Eldon Lostron, his wife Mary and sons Ellwood, 13; Leo, 11; Rodney, 9; Aaron, 3; and Nels, 2.

The fire was reported to the Ladysmith volunteer fire department at 9:37 p.m. The cottage was reported destroyed about an hour later.

policy forbids anyone to take firefighting equipment outside municipal boundaries.

Volunteer firemen from Ladysmith went to the fire but could only watch the house burn, RCMP said. Nearby houses were watered down by firemen and neighbors to prevent the blaze from spreading.

The house was a one-level building without a basement. Cause of the fire and total damage figures were not known Friday night.

No injuries were reported. RCMP estimated value of the furniture lost at about $6,000.

Fatal Plunge

Driver of this camper truck, James Decoste, 33, of Gold River missed east approach to single lane Gold River Bridge earlier this week and plunged 40 feet to his death in icy waters. Death was third fatality at bridge in six months and has brought public demands for action to improve safety of bridge, which has no handrails or footpath yet is used by high school students to get to nearby general store. Gold River council has sent letter to Highways Minister Wesley Black seeking immediate action.

Collision Kills Woman

PARKSVILLE — A Campbell River woman was killed and two men were injured Friday morning when a car and truck collided on the Island Highway near Cook Creek north of Parksville.

Parksville RCMP identified the dead woman as Ruby Caldwell, 55, of the Island Highway in Campbell River.

RCMP said Mrs. Caldwell was passenger in a car driven by her husband Joseph A. Caldwell, 59, which was in collision with a truck driven by Robert B. Tacon, 29, of 3115 Washington, Victoria.

The two men were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox. Hospital authorities Friday night said Caldwell was in fair condition with chest injuries and a broken hip and Tacon was treated for minor injuries and later released.

RCMP said the highway at the scene of the crash was slippery. An inquest has been ordered.

MOUNTIES GET WRONG MAN

CAMPBELL RIVER — For once the RCMP did not get its man. Officers got one all right — but it was not the right one.

Donald Lawrence MacDonald currently in custody at the Lakeview Forestry Camp near Campbell River, was brought into court to face a traffic charge which occurred last June.

After Provincial Court Judge Hugh Campbell had read the charge, MacDonald calmly said he hadn't driven a car for two years.

Non-plussed, the RCMP officer acting for the crown dug into a large file, bombarding the suspect with questions concerning his activities over the past two years.

MacDonald was able to answer the questions to the satisfaction of the court. Finally the constable said: "We must have the wrong man, sorry about that."

MacDonald was then returned to the forestry camp.

Port Alberni Shooting Suspect

Bail Size Under Scrutiny

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

The new bail-reform sections of Canada's Criminal Code could mean a 42-year-old Port Alberni man once held on $20,000 bail on a charge of attempted murder may be released next Tuesday without any bail at all.

Judge William Ostler said Friday in Victoria Provincial Court the new sections apply to the case of Joseph McKenna, who was charged Dec. 3 with attempting to murder Leslie Edward Walsh, 30, in a shooting the day before in a CPR work-train car on a siding in the Colwood area.

The sections require a judge to release without bail any person charged with an offence less serious than murder, treason or sabotage unless the prosecutor can show cause why bail should be set or the person should remain in custody.

The judge is allowed to order one or more conditions from a lengthy list that ranges from staying in a certain area to putting up a big surety and Ostler decided in one case earlier this week that a $5,000 surety was required.

The main section is No. 457 and Ostler said Friday after McKenna was brought in from police cells: "We're back to Section 457 even though it's attempted murder" (meaning the charge).

He gave prosecutor John

MacIntyre until Tuesday morning to obtain evidence so he can try to show cause for bail in McKenna's case.

The new sections went into

On Dec. 17, the judge reduced the bail to $11,000 at the request of defence lawyer Ted Pollard but McKenna was still in custody Friday because of inability to raise a surety that large.

Saanich QC Named As Nanaimo Judge

Bowen-Colthurst
... highly respected

T. G. (Paddy) Bowen-Colthurst, QC, who has served as general counsel to the attorney-general since 1959, will resign to become a Provincial Court judge in Nanaimo Feb. 1.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who announced the appointment of Bowen-Colthurst Friday, said the new judge brings to the bench many years of invaluable experience. "As general counsel he has built a tremendous reputation," the attorney-general said.

"His knowledge and dedication are highly respected by all members of the legal profession. And I'm sure that in taking on the responsibility of district Provincial Court judge he will find new challenges and stimulation."

Bowen-Colthurst, of 966 Saturna Place, Saanich, replaces Judge Eric Winch who is retiring. He was born in England but came to B.C. at an early age, was educated at Shawnigan Lake and Brentwood College, then graduated from UBC in law. In 1960, he was appointed Queen's Counsel.

Island Light Horses To Double by 1982

DUNCAN — The light horse population on Vancouver Island is expected to double by 1982.

So says one of five main authors of the latest Agricultural Outlook booklet, Ken Jameson, district agriculturalist at Duncan.

Jameson says light horses have a good future on the Island and he predicts a steady increase of the horse population for the next 10 years.

In common with most parts of B.C., the light horse industry on the Island had grown rapidly in recent years to about 3,000. Most of the horses and ponies were kept for pleasure but he said there is an increasing number of breeding farms where several mares and one or more stallions are kept to build up a breeding herd.

Jameson, who is 4-H supervisor on southern Vancouver Island, also predicted increased numbers of beef cattle on the Island in the next decade, despite the fact that production of beef and veal is mainly on a part-time basis because of high costs of land and land development, high feed costs, and lack of natural grazing.

Dairy Origin

Many of the animals kept for beef purposes are of dairy origin. He said beef production is expected to increase slowly, reaching at least 25 per cent above present figures by 1982.

Reflecting on sheep production Jameson said that although Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands are well suited, the increase of rural subdivisions and rising land values will prevent a boost in the sheep population to any great extent.

He said it is expected that by 1982 the value of sheep production on the Island will be about the same as the 1970 value. For swine farming Jameson predicted that because of a trend toward larger operations, hog production may become more stabilized but in the long run production is not likely to increase more than 25 per cent over the 1970 figures.

In the dairy section, dairy inspector C. G. Johnstone noted that Vancouver Island milk production has increased by 3.5 per cent during the first eight months of 1971 over a similar period in 1970, which would indicate an annual total production of 89,383,873 pounds of milk.

Poorer Prices

Johnstone said that a trend toward a common weighted average price throughout the province will inevitably occur with the strong possibility of a continuing static or deteriorating price on Vancouver Island to the producer.

He said evidence shows that costs of production on Vancouver Island, depending on the efficiency of the unit vary from 30 cents to $1 a hundred higher than elsewhere in the province. Johnstone said some changes in milk marketing could be necessary if milk production is to remain a viable industry.

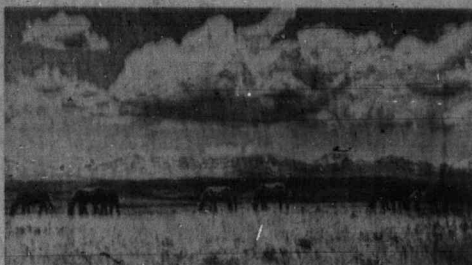

The agricultural production area including livestock, dairy, poultry, field crops, horticulture, and special crops includes all of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Agriculture is concentrated along the eastern coast on a narrow strip extending from Victoria to Campbell River, consisting of about 710,000 acres which is about 8 per cent of the total land area.

Taking Stock?

Valuation Day, the day that the national revenue department will use for your 1972 income tax calculations, has been declared as Wednesday, Dec. 23, 1971. The valuation date for bonds and other assets is set at Dec. 31, 1971. Capital gains or losses in shares held by Canadians will be calculated from that date. The Daily Colonist, through its Canadian Press stock wire services, today is providing readers with a complete list of stocks on Canadian exchanges for Dec. 23 and the prices of them accepted by the revenue department. The list covers Pages 8 and 9.

Prototype Bombs In Symbolic Banks

Bank Bombs Shake Police

Cleverly-fashioned time bombs were removed safely Friday from banks in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, where they were planted months ago in an ominous demonstration of a plot to free "all political prisoners."

At least one of the devices was planted in each of the three great United States financial centres—Wall Street in New York, LaSalle Street in Chicago and Montgomery Street in San Francisco.

Planted Six Months Ago

Eight explosive devices in as many banks were found and disarmed upon directions of the bomber or bombers, who sent anonymous letters listing their locations. The letters said the bombs were planted in safe-deposit boxes six months ago.

A ninth bomb in San Francisco's Bank of America apparently exploded prematurely last September, causing only minor damage.

For nearly 10 hours after the handwritten, special delivery warning letters were received during the night in Chicago and San Francisco, tension mounted among authorities from coast to coast as they awaited out removal of the bombs.

In all three cities, it was necessary to wait until well after dawn Friday for time locks to expire and open the banks' massive vault doors.

In four cases, the letter writer mailed keys to the safe-deposit boxes where the bombs were deposited. In the others, specialists had to drill open the boxes, since the bank's key would not work alone in the absence of the depositor's key.

Okinawa Return Speeded By Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon has agreed in summit talks with Premier Eisaku Sato of Japan to return Okinawa to Japanese control May 15, about six weeks earlier than the United States wanted.

The two leaders also reported substantial progress towards improving economic ties strained by Japanese trade barriers. And they agreed to establish a "hot line" between Washington and Tokyo to improve high-level communications between the two major Pacific powers.

U.S. officials had pressed for major concessions in lowering trade barriers and other restrictions which have fed a $3-billion annual deficit in U.S. trade with Japan.

Sources said these concessions were the price for an early return of the now-populous Second World War island of Okinawa to Japanese control.

As he bade farewell to the Japanese premier, Nixon said the "far-ranging and very comprehensive discussions" disclosed "a natural interdependence between Japan and the United States."

During a news conference, Sato acknowledged he had not asked Nixon to visit Japan because of the fear of demonstration against the American leader.

He also told reporters:

● Japan will not intervene to defend the security of Taiwan or South Korea but the United States will be able to do so from Japanese bases, on the condition that it sends its forces to trouble spots indirectly.

● Though U.S. bases will remain on Okinawa, the U.S. has been asked to reduce its facilities there as much as possible.

● "Not only nuclear weapons, but also chemical and biological weapons will be removed from Okinawa."

'Only Bennett Can Do It'

Gas Bidders Demand Clear Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The presidents of two companies competing for approval to build a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island from the mainland want clarification—and soon—of the rules affecting the competition.

Ron Rutherford, president of Pacific Northern Gas, says he can't see how the applicants could go ahead if the clarification isn't made by Jan. 15, date of the next meeting between applicants and the Public Utilities Commission.

Their statements followed word from Gordon Shrum, chairman of B.C. Hydro, that Hydro could build a pipeline to the island without PUC approval and would — if it chooses — have distribution rights on the island for gas from any pipeline.

Meanwhile, Resources Minister Ray Williston, also a Hydro director, said Thursday the position is that Hydro will distribute in Greater Victoria and also in economically-feasible areas the successful pipeline company does not wish to serve itself.

The two pipeline presidents said there are many important differences between the two statements.

Bailey said Shrum's statement on distribution, combined with statements made by him earlier to the commission, means that, not only have the rules for building the pipeline been changed, but

Leak in High Places Not So Bad After All

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mrs. William Rogers, wife of the secretary of state, said at a recent luncheon that her husband is briefed by an aide every morning on events that transpired around the world during the night.

Her husband once urged his aide to report some good news for a change. "There's no good news, sir, but there's some bad news that's not our fault," the aide said. "The Aswan Dam is leaking."

Mujib Returns To Bangladesh

Sheikh Mujib ... in Dacca

NEW DELHI (AP) — Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has been released and has flown to Dacca, capital of Bangladesh, Pakistan radio announced today. President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto saw the sheikh off at the airport when the Bengali leader returned to his home, the station said.

The plane left early this morning Pakistan time, it said.

In a Bengali broadcast heard here, the radio quoted an official Pakistani spokesman as saying Bhutto did not want to impose his will on the sheikh since Mujib is the leader of "East Pakistan."

The radio did not say whether Bhutto and Mujib held a final round of talks before the sheikh left.

Spanish Jet Crash Kills 104

IBIZA, Balearic Islands (AP) — A Spanish airliner coming down through fog for a landing smashed into a 1,000-foot peak on this Spanish Mediterranean island Friday. Officials said all 104 aboard the twin-jet Caravelle died. Rescue squads found debris and bodies scattered over a wide area but no survivors shortly after the Iberia Airlines plane dropped out of the clouds and slammed into the mountain.

Most of the passengers were Spaniards. Many were traveling to the resort island from the southern city of Valencia.

A spokesman for the airline said two men — Jeff Desk of New York City and a Mr. Fricker from West Germany — were believed to be the only foreigners among the 98 passengers and six crew members.

The crash was the worst in Iberia's history but not the worst in Spain. Eighteen months ago a British Dan-Air charter jet crashed near Barcelona killing 185 persons.

Iberia's worst previous crash was March 31, 1965, when one of its planes crashed off Tangier with a loss of 50 lives.

The Iberia flight was en route from Madrid to Ibiza, a favorite summer place for hippies, with a stop in Valencia.

The plane crashed about five miles from the Ibiza airport, one of the busiest in Spain during the peak of the summer holiday season.

Cholera Threat

GENEVA (UPI) — Europe can expect a further invasion of cholera this year, the World Health Organization said Friday.

Last year there were cases in Algeria, Morocco, Portugal and Spain and isolated cases in France, West Germany, Sweden and Britain. Altogether, 40 countries reported 156,000 cases and 23,000 deaths.

Husband Dies of Cold, Wife Feeds Baby Snow

RAWLINS, Wyo. (UPI) — A Rawlins woman stranded four days in a blizzard Friday said she burned floor mats to keep warm and melted snow to feed her 18-month-old baby while waiting rescue by persons she thought her husband would find.

The husband, Johnny Montano, 25, had frozen to death about eight miles from where he left his family in the temperature that ranged from 37 to 50 degrees below zero.

A search party Thursday found Mrs. Consuelo Montano and her daughter Melissa conscious but suffering from frostbite and exposure. A short time later they found Montano's body.

The incident occurred about 17 miles southwest of Rawlins.

"They had gone out rabbit hunting New Year's Day and the truck got stuck," said a spokesman for the Carbon County sheriff's office. "He (Montano) left about midnight Sunday to get aid for his wife and child. He made it about six miles and lit a fire and we found him about two miles from there."

"He was just a half-mile from a railroad section house that had people living in it who could have helped him."

Montano had set out dressed only in jeans, shirt, boots and jacket.

"He had a child's hat wrapped around his face, for warmth," said the spokesman. Officials said Mrs. Montano burned floor mats and anything else she could find to keep warm after using up all of the truck's gas to keep the heater running.

Charles Martinez, her brother, said when he and his companions first found the truck, Mrs. Montano was partially delirious from the cold and lack of food.

"She said the baby kept crying for daddy and food and so she would go out and get some snow and feed that to her," he explained. He added Mrs. Montano told her husband was dead even before being told his body had been found.

Doctors Say Updating Badly Needed

Colonist Reporter
An official of the B.C. Medical Association said Friday that once the current dispute with the provincial government is settled doctors will review their Workmen's Compensation Board fees.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the BCMA, said the schedule of fees under which doctors bill the Workmen's Compensation Board is badly in need of updating.

"We will get to that as soon as the present situation is cleared up," he added.

The fee schedule that applies to the WCB is similar to that which doctors use for their medicare billings.

Last year, B.C.'s doctors collected $2.7 million from the compensation board. By way of comparison, their total gross medicare earnings were $128.1 million.

The $2.7 million that the compensation board paid out to doctors was among the $8.8 million that the WCB spent on medical services to injured workers.

Of that total, B.C. Hospital

Insurance Service, the government agency responsible for hospitals, got about $4 million.

All of WCB's costs are assessed to employers.

The B.C. Medical Association is awaiting word from the provincial government as to whether it will satisfy medicine billings made under a schedule of minimum fees that went into effect Jan. 1.

The only offer made by the government has been a 10 per cent "global" increase in the cost of medicare. This would include all the factors contributing to medicare's total costs. The portion that would go to fee increases would depend on the control of utilization, new services and so on.

Anti-Pipeline THE BIGGEST THING Cash Sought in your life With Ad Blitz

Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson plans an advertising campaign in Victoria and Vancouver to boost his appeal for funds to fight the proposed Alaska oil pipeline in the United States courts. Anderson said Thursday in an interview from Vancouver that ads will be placed in newspapers this week and next asking for 10,000 interested citizens to donate $5 each to the cause.

$50,000 Goal

The $50,000 target is the maximum amount he figures will be needed to finance the lawsuit launched by himself and the Canadian Wildlife Federation.

Anderson said only about $1,000 has trickled in since he first announced his appeal for funds in mid-November.

The lawsuit was launched with the aim of forcing U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers Morton to make sure oil-spill dangers to the B.C. coast are properly considered before he approves the pipeline and the oil tanker route from Alaska to Washington state.

A hearing is scheduled for Jan. 14 in U.S. federal court in Washington, D.C.

Anderson said he believed there are enough interested people in the Vancouver and Victoria areas to meet the $50,000 objective.

"If we don't raise that much, we'll go as far as the money we have will take us," he told a press conference.

The money is needed to cover legal expenses for the suit and any future appeals, plus the cost of travel and accommodation for expert witnesses.

Anderson said his lawyers feel there is a good chance of winning the case in appeal court if the suit is rejected by U.S. Federal Court Judge George Hart.

He said six of the nine ap- peal court judges are believed to be sympathetic to the cause of environmental groups challenging the Alyeska consortium's oil project.

"But regardless of whether we win, we've got people aware and considering the problem," he said.

"Even just trying to go to court we demonstrated to a good number of American congressmen the weakness of the Alyeska case. We flushed them out. We think we've put them on the spot."

Success of the suit, Anderson said, would force a proper study of such things as cur- rents in the proposed tanker route through Juan de Fuca Strait and Rosario Strait, wildlife populations and habits in the area and cleanup procedures in the event of a spill.

Financing Should Be Known

Developers should be re- quired to give full disclosure of ownership and financing when they place a proposal before city council for ap- proval, says Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

They also should be re- quired to submit economic feasibility studies to the city at the time of application for approval of any project, Pol- len says.

"I think we have the right, indeed the responsibility, to demand a justification from developers for the proposed height and density of a project," the mayor said in an interview Thursday.

Legislation to that effect would have to be introduced by the provincial government under the Municipal Act.

The reason for his belief that such legislation is urgently needed, Pollen said, was that a great number of de- velopers are only interested in money, and give no consid- eration to the city's envi- ronment.

"If a free enterpriser en- deavors to maximize his profits, it seems to me that the community should endeavor to maximize the city's livability."

"Unfortunately, but ob- viously, the cities are totally incompatible; therefore, we have to strike a happy medi- um somewhere."

Forcing developers to dis- close their financial back- ers and to justify their proposals on an economic basis, Pollen said, would not set a precedent.

"The federal government now demands full disclosure of ownership from banks, radio and TV stations; they won't allow undisclosed ownership."

The increased frequency of development by international firms and large corporations made new legislation even more imperative.

And until the question of ownership regarding massive development proposals is re- solved by the introduction of proper legislation, Pollen said, all he can do is to insist on disclosure whenever the city is negotiating with a de- veloper.

Clinic Passes Goal

NANAIMO — The three-day Red Cross blood donor clinic that was in Nanaimo the first three days of the week ex- ceeded the 1,000-pint goal by 127 pints.

This was a record number of donations for Nanaimo, ac- cording to local Red Cross of- ficial Fred Cooper.

Winners of the Nanaimo Re- alty trophy for the most donors found one firm were Harmac pulp mill and Maia- spina College—VTS with 80 each. Runner up was Nana- imo School District, with 60 donors.

The Jaycee trophy for the highest percentage from one firm will be split four ways among the Nanaimo, Depart- ure Bay and North Cedar Fire Departments and the Nanaimo Karate Club. All had 100 per cent turnout. Runner- up was the local RCMP.

China Explodes Nuclear Device

WASHINGTON (UPI)— China set off its first nuclear test of 1972 in the atmosphere Friday, the U.S. Atomic En- ergy Commission said.

The explosion, with a force of less than 20 kilotons (equi- valent to 20,000 tons of TNT), took place at the northwest Chinese testing site of Lop Nqr, the AEC said.

Ready for Casanova?

TORONTO (CP) — Are Canadian audiences ready to accept Casanova, the latest BBC historical television series?

That's a question now being mulled over by CBC decision-makers.

BBC series such as The Six Wives of Henry VIII have been well received in Canada, but Casanova features nudity galore.

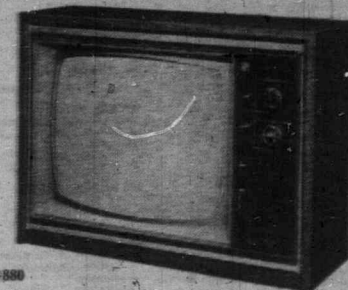

"Casanova is beautifully done, but I'm not sure we in Canada are ready for it," says Thom Benson, director of entertainment for CBC-TV.

Benson says he is concerned that rural viewers especially "will get a little bit nervous seeing this activity."

The "activity" includes many shots of naked women lying on beds waiting for Casanova, and nude bathing scenes.

The Voice Behind Cartoons

By JEANNETTE MAZURKI
Copy News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "People expect to meet a tall willowy blonde instead of a short, dumpy brunette," mused Barbara Luddy, one of radio's most famous voices.

The versatile actress is a perennial favorite around the Walt Disney Studio having lent her vocal talents to the voice of the lovely cocker spaniel in Lady and the Tramp, and the meek Kanga in the featurettes, Winnie the Pooh and the Honey Tree and the Oscar-winning Winnie the Pooh and the Blustery Day.

In old radio days Miss Luddy was the star of one of the day's most popular programs, First Nighter, in which she starred opposite Les Tremayne.

"Everyone expected us to be in love but we were just good friends," said Barbara who runs into the actor every so often in tinseltown.

"I have been in every type of show business except circus," Barbara proudly emphasizes. "When I was eight years old I began singing with Red Cross productions in my home town of Helena, Mont. Then when the family moved to California I got to do it professionally because my parents were ill."

Barbara toured with shows on the West Coast as a singer and dancer. Later when her voice changed she switched to non-singing roles and its unusual timber started a new career for her.

"I was an extra in pictures when I was 16 and I was under contract to the old Fox studio," she recalled. "I appeared in a series of comedy shorts called East Side, West Side."

After a year and a half with the studio stock company they dropped my contract, and that of another promising comedienne, Carole Lombard.

Opera Popular

WINNIPEG — Greater Winnipeg, with a population of about 500,000, supports five opera companies, two of them professional.

Barbara free-lanced with Hollywood radio stations until joining the cast of First Nighter. When the program moved to Chicago she was put under exclusive contract to the sponsor.

She has acted in TV series including Adam 12, Ironside, Marcus Welby MD, The Sha-kiest Gun in the West and Alfred Hitchcock's Topaz.

Miss Luddy has done several television commercials, her most profitable being an Ajax, white tornado in 1961 in which she received $3,000 over a year's period.

"TV has been nice to me," says Barbara, "but I couldn't use a series and more commercials."

Giants Show Signs of Awakening

Inside the Tube
With Bill Mahan

The sleepy network giants are beginning to show signs of awakening. CBS and Bud Yorkin have continued All In The Family, the biggest hit of the new season, and now NBC is coming out with Sanford and Son, a mid-season replacement due to debut next Friday and again with Yorkin as executive producer.

Sanford and Son is not anything like All In The Family. The only comparison is that it looks as though it's going to be an equally honest series. It stars two black actors, Redd Foxx as Sanford and Desmond Wilson as his son.

Basically it's a simple format about an aging Los Angeles junk dealer and his 32-year-old son who lives with him. Papa is a little lazy and leans heavily on Jr. to do the work and see that everything is properly taken care of. Jr. is crazy about his old man but would really like to break away from home and attempt to make a life for himself — maybe even get married and start a family.

Redd Foxx has been around a good many years. He's recorded 50 record albums that have sold over 10 million discs in the last 15 years, and he's been making nightclub appearances since 1940. His television appearances include The Flip Wilson Show, The Steve Allen Show, Johnny Carson and Virginia Graham, Sanford and Son will be his first series.

Desmond Wilson has been acting since the age of four, when he appeared on Broadway with William Marshall in The Greep Years. A Vietnam veteran, he has also appeared in the national company of Boys in the Band, Mission Impossible and All In The Family. This will be his first series also.

Anson Rubin, the show's producer, is no novice in television, having produced the Andy Griffith Show and created and executive-produced Gomer Pyle. However, this will be the first time he has attempted to bring realistic comedy to us viewers.

Sanford and Son, like All In The Family, is based on a British series. In England it's called Steptoe and Son, about two cockney junk dealers.

With television constantly being badmouthed by everyone, including myself, it's interesting to note that certain changes for the better are coming about, and, hopefully, staying about. Steve Allen has offered Meeting of the Minds, CBS All In The Family, and now NBC's Sanford and Son, all stimulating, all honest (so honest that it makes you realize all the more how dishonest most series are) and all entertaining.

Sanford and Son comes to the tube with no known star, no name value. But, as was true with All In The Family, it comes with sharp scripts, humor, warmth and poignancy. The actors could be white, black, Mexican or Chinese and the show wouldn't be any different.

If you happen to be flipping your channel selector on Friday at 8 p.m., try NBC. I think you're in for a treat.

Bogie Specialist To Repeat Role

HOLLYWOOD (Special) — Jerry Lacy, who played Humphrey Bogart in the Broadway production of Woody Allen's Play It Again, Sam, will repeat the role in the Paramount version, to be filmed later this year.

'APRIL FOOL' JOKE ENDS IN JAIL TERM

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — Television channel 8 of Quito was closed and its news director jailed for transmission of a false news item last Dec. 28, so-called "April Fool's Day" in Ecuador.

The news item had "announced" suspension of the elections scheduled for June, and said President Jose M. Velasco Ibarra would remain in power two more years.

Channel 8 announced within 4 minutes after the "news flash" that it was a joke, but rival television channel 6 had picked up the item as legitimate and broadcast it as serious.

Four New Series Start on Cable 10

Continuing the frequent changes in the community programming on Victoria Cablevision's Channel 10, program director Bob Aylward has announced four new series will start in the coming week - including the channel's first in the French language.

The changes start Monday at 7 p.m. with the debut of the Victoria SPCA program Community Pets, followed at 7:30 by a National Film Board series called Earth and Mankind, making its debut on Cable 10.

Chroniques de France, a series made for Vancouver's cablevision channel and obtained by barter, will begin at 9 p.m. Tuesday.

The Victoria Life Underwriters Association comes to Channel 10 for the first time at 7 p.m. Wednesday with a series called Living Dollars.

And Aylward also said the Music Victoria series from the Conservatory of Music will be repeated at 8:30 p.m. Friday, starting during the coming week.

HOLLYWOOD — Autograph collectors would have been in heaven recently if only they could have gotten past the guards on three nearly consecutive nights when an exciting galaxy of stars was assembled for three special events.

The first was the taping of Ed Sullivan's Entertainer of the Year special at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas. The show, to be aired next Friday over the CBS network, features performers chosen by the American Guild of Variety Artists as tops in their fields, so a staggering array of talent was on hand for the taping.

The audience was disappointed that Bob Hope had predated his turn and that Tom Jones was taping his segment in England. However, they did get to see Sonny and Cher, Jack Benny, Danny Thomas, Don Rickles, Lily Tomlin, Rodney Dangerfield and Flip Wilson, among others.

Chastity, Sonny and Cher's 3-year-old daughter, was attracting almost as much favorable attention backstage as her parents were doing in front of the curtain. Wearing a yellow granny dress and earrings, she looked like a doll and behaved with as much poise as Sullivan himself.

Sonny says she'll make brief appearances on the new television series he and her mom are doing.

Two nights after the Sullivan taping, another assembly of stars gathered at the Century Plaza Hotel in Beverly Hills to honor Bob Hope and to raise money for a new Hollywood USO building.

Entertainment at the $500-a-plate affair featured performers like Frances Langford, Jack Pepper and Irene Ryan who toured with Hope more than 20 years ago as well as Jim Nabors, Miss America-U.S.A. and The Hollywood Deb-Stars, who are with Bob on his current Christmas tour.

Diners included not only Hollywood greats (Ray Milland, Fred MacMurray, Jimmy Durante, etc.) but financial, political and military greats (Gen. William Westmoreland, Sen. Barry Goldwater, Lears, Firestones, etc.).

Then, too, there were young servicemen and women in the crowd representing all of those Hope has entertained and all of those who'll use the new USO building.

A young soldier from Thomasville, Ga., at our table had brought his autograph book to the dinner and was surprised and ecstatic that Hope, lovely Dorothy Lamour and others had signed it so graciously.

A plump WAVE shock hands with Jimmy Durante and squealed, "I'll never wash this hand again."

A Marine in dress blues said to another with unabashed awe, "I've seen more stars in 20 minutes than most people see in their lives."

He was probably right.

A third conglomeration of celebrities got together the night after the Hope party at CBS for Merv Griffin's tribute to producer Howard Koch. Unfortunately I can't give you details, because after I'd bathed, put on make-up and combed my hair for the evening, I sat down on the sofa and went to sleep.

So I missed mingling with the stars of Koch's pictures who paid him tribute on the Griffin show and at a reception later. Among those whom I didn't get to see were Mike Connors, Jack Lemmon, Dan Blocker, Walter Matthau and Sandy Duncan (without Hugh O'Brian).

Key Ballard, long deviled with a weight problem, lost 20 pounds at Marietta Hot Springs, a California health spa. Back in Hollywood, the slim Kay celebrated her birthday while doing a guest spot on the Flip Wilson Show where Flip, as a salute to her new figure, surprised her with a birthday cake made of dietetic Jello and topped with a candle for each of the 20 pounds she'd lost.

Robert Brown almost lost his head during one of the season's final segments of Primus. Anyway, that's the way he tells it. According to Robert, he agreed to wrestle an anaconda underwater never dreaming that the snake would be 25 feet long. Before the scene was over, Robert says, the snake had Brown's head in its mouth. Only the actor's diving headgear saved him from injury.

Sensationalism or Truth?

Producers, Newsmen in Struggle Over Objectivity in Broadcasting

Bill Moyers
... on committee

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist TV Writer

Disclosure of an internal struggle within the Public Broadcast Service, which provides most of the programs seen on U.S. education-and-information stations like Seattle's Channel 9, may have answered a fascinating question — where is the reporting of news headed?

A report from New York says a special committee set up last year by PBS to write a set of journalistic standards has done so, but production bigwigs in various PBS stations throughout the U.S. have shot it down as too binding to be workable.

The report indicates the main objection of the producers has been to sections on balance and objectivity, and makes it clear the producers won their point — because meetings have been scheduled to discuss revision of the standards.

The work of the special committee is the first reported instance in at least recent U.S. television history of a network trying to lay down broad guidelines within which both broadcast news reporters and production men could work.

The apparent failure of the committee is despite an obvious desire of PBS president Hartford Gurn, who was behind the whole idea, to fill in with prestigious names.

The committee chairman was highly respected former NBC newsmen Elie Abel, now dean of Columbia University's graduate school of journalism. Members included Bill Moyers, a former news aide to Lyndon Johnson and now host of the PBS behind-the-scenes series This Week, as well as men from NBC, the EBC and other parts of the industry.

Just what was it that the producers objected to?

The New York report says the standard for balance began by saying most serious issues have many sides, not just two that can be outlined by a neat, even treatment. It went on:

"Balance requires the honest, unceasing effort to recognize and represent this full range of views. But balance demands that the broadcaster direct his attention not only to internal treatment of subject matter but also to the broad sweep of programming.

"Is there a disproportion, an imbalance of certain types of programs or a predominance of specific issues? This represents the most subjective of judgments, and honest recognition of the problem is its best, indeed the only, solution."

It would seem that the committee members, whose experience is grounded in careers of reporting, felt the reporter has an obligation to consider more than what he is reporting and what he thinks of it.

The producers apparently felt they have no such obligation. If that is a fact, then they probably objected more strenuously to the section on objectivity than to any other. The committee's standard on objectivity read:

"We recognize the obligation to strive for objectivity. It, like balance, is an elusive, unattainable ideal, limited by human emotion, which — if it steers our mind in certain directions — also sharpens our intelligence and gives meaning to our work.

"Reporters and production teams naturally and legitimately begin work with a hypothesis, but they abandon their professionalism when they start with a conclusion.

"Such a commitment freezes the interchange of ideas and inhibits thorough and thoughtful investigation. Objectivity demands an unconditional allegiance to accuracy; it permits no room for distortion by conscious manipulation of select facts into a foolish or weak position.

"But objective, honest reporting is more than a mechanical process of collecting raw data. It requires conscientious attention to detail and honest commitment to inquiry. Objectivity also imposes on the journalist the obligation to indicate trends and identify conclusions that may naturally emerge from his work."

The report says the producers objected to this section as being so binding it would have wiped out many of TV's most famous exposés, like the army-McCarthy hearings or the Selling of the Pentagon. This seems unlikely but, even if it is true, what is advancing the ethics of an industry which is constantly under fire if an "unconditional allegiance to accuracy" is opposed, along with a rule against distortion and manipulation.

After TV came to the press conference in the 1950s, newspaper reporters began to see that the public officials holding the conferences began to gravitate to the broadcasters and away from the press.

The officials could see that they could get their point of view before more people through TV than newspapers and could get it through virtually untouched by an attempt to present both sides, such as the newspapermen might make.

At the same time, the newspaperman could see there was more glamor — and money — in TV journalism than in his old field. So he, too, began to gravitate to broadcasting.

The result seems to have been a change in journalism away from getting both sides the first time — and a change to a picture of information where now Walter Cronkite looks is more important than what he says.

And the result also is this best-documented case in years of how producers have the final say in broadcast journalism, which carries far more clout than newspapers do in a nation, if not in a community.

Wonder how the revised standards, will read, on balance?

Newsman Groomed

To most Americans, the face of news in the 1960s was either Chet Huntley, David Brinkley or Walter Cronkite — but NBC hopes the face in the 1970s will be Garrick Utley.

The lanky, lantern-jawed broadcaster has been given the key jobs on NBC of replacement man on the regular evening news and host of the monthly Chronolog newsmagazine and word from New York is that the network is staking a lot of money in salary and publicity on the public's acceptance of Utley as the king in the not too distant future.

PBS Chief Blames Government

Slanting of News 'Scandal'

By JEFFREY ST. JOHN
Colonist News Service

BOSTON — "Slanting of television network news is one of the open scandals of American society," insisted William Rusher on the Public Broadcasting Service program The Advocates, taped here. "Yet to date, not a single effective step has been taken to bring a little balance into this crucially important area."

"Can coercive government command balance in network news broadcasts?" Rusher, publisher of the conservative National Review, believes it can by applying the Federal Communications Commission Fairness Doctrine to network news broadcasts after 40 years of failure to command fairness in matters of opinion in broadcasting.

Howard Miller, Rusher's opposite on the PBS program,

The Advocates, argued that broadcast journalism should be given the same protection under the First Amendment as newspapers. Here we have a remarkable irony: Miller, a moderate liberal, arguing for placing broadcast journalism beyond the reach of government, and Rusher, a conservative long known for his opposition to government intervention, arguing for continuation of government control of broadcasting and the application of the FCC Fairness Doctrine to network news broadcasts.

Edith Efron, a feature writer for TV Guide, also appeared on the PBS program. Miss Efron is the author of a just-published study of alleged network news slanting in the last seven weeks of the 1968 presidential campaign. Called The News Twisters, the book purports to present a precise case of news bias against then-candidate Richard Nixon, adding up to an indictment of a liberal bias in news broadcasting.

"The ideal solution," states Miss Efron, "to be enacted as soon as technology permits, is to blow the government out of television altogether. To excel the government totally from the confines of an intellectual medium. Until that is done, the basic monopolistic situation that exists can't be deprived of the only hedge against this kind of thing, the use of the Fairness Doctrine."

The fact remains, however, that what Miss Efron is talking about "as soon as technology permits" is cable TV, which faces the same fate of government regulation as commercial broadcasting. So the solution is no solution and the use of the Fairness Doctrine to somehow bring balance to network broadcast news is likely to end as it has in the past: a political weapon used and abused by whatever political party has control of the FCC.

This columnist was asked to appear on The Advocates speaking for abolition of the Fairness Doctrine and extension of First Amendment protection to broadcast news. My argument is that while bias does exist in network news broadcasts, coercive government cannot command creativity and fairness. The way non-liberals must meet this problem is to actively offer their own talents to the networks as this columnist has done. The success of this approach can be measured by the fact that we now do three commentaries a week for the CBS Radio Network, one commentary a week for the CBS Morning News and a bimonthly report on business for the NBC-TV Today Show.

Major Struggle Now Battle of the Bulge

HOLLYWOOD — As he studied the luncheon menu, Eddie Albert's eyes fell upon an interesting item. "Cucumber soup," he murmured. "That's not fattening, is it?"

Eddie mused: "In my starving actor period in Greenwich Village, I could easily go a day without a meal because I had to. Now I have to go on these awful diets and it isn't so easy. Best thing to do is stay at a fancy hotel and step on one of their scales. I think they purposely set the scales about five pounds lower. Makes you feel so good you don't mind when they hand you the bill."

Eddie often as not views life from a bemused tilt and his conversation is usually sprinkled with such oddments as the following:

"It's curious that most of us will eat the same thing for breakfast day after day. With me, it's the same old bacon and eggs every day. But at night we've got to have variety. Can't have the same old dinner."

"The reason, I read somewhere, is traceable to the old days when man lived in caves. In the morning, man felt groggy and insecure. There was danger in the air — he might get hit by a flying barracuda. Eating the same food is a search for security."

Eddie, wife Margo at breakfast

But at night, after making it through the day, we feel more at ease, freer. Or so the theory goes."

Mention a subject and Eddie Albert has a theory, inevitably a valid one. There was, for instance, his old series, Green Acres, which enjoyed a great success.

"Return to the soil," said Eddie. "That's what Green Acres was all about."

"Since the time of Aristophanes, that's been a popular theme — city man going to the country; the country boy yearning for the big city lights."

"It helps," Eddie added, "when you return to the soil with Eva Gabor — a Hungarian accent in Dior gown swilling the pigs."

As it turned out, Eddie elected to spurn the non-fattening cucumber soup and go for a steak, and that brought on another theory.

"Food and security," he said. "They're wrapped up together. Expensive restaurants use their decor and lighting to give you a feeling of security, a sense of tradition. They want to create a tone of leisure, which security brings. But you take some coffee shop where they're after a fast turnover — there they have overbright lights and a lot of unnecessary clutter. They want you to run in, eat fast and run out — a deliberate attempt to create insecurity."

We talked about the aging process and Eddie, who swallows a fistful of vitamins and food supplements every day, suggested that actors tend to stay younger than ordinary mortals.

And why, you may well ask, do actors remain young?

"To begin with," said Eddie, "actors must have a built-in adolescent quality, a childlike naivete, a sense of fun and wonder and delight — and all that automatic adulation an actor gets is very soothing to the wrinkles in your liver."

Firsthand Knowledge

Human Journey, a series of specials about a human's life that won CTV a number of awards, will be repeated starting with The Early Years segment at 9 p.m. Sunday on Channel 8. Jerry Lawton, producer-director-writer of the first segment, had a technical adviser with firsthand knowledge: his son, at right. And Mrs. Lawton, behind him, helped as well.

Archie's Career, Horoscope Coincide

By HERB STANTON
Copley News Service

Question: "Our favorite TV show is All in the Family. Carroll O'Connor is so convincing as Archie... Is he anything like him in real life?"

Answer: This is the horoscope of a gifted actor, not a bigot. O'Connor has been turning in excellent stage and screen performances for years, as in Cleopatra. (His efforts in that epic went almost unnoticed, due to the uproar over Liz Taylor and Richard Burton.) It took the night of Jan. 12, 1971, to make Carroll O'Connor a star.

On that night, All in the Family debuted and created a sensation.

The spark plug of this great success was O'Connor. What manner of man could so stimulate and provoke his audience?

"A man of deep passion and feeling... majestic arrogance... (he) is the finest American character actor," says director Robert Brown.

"An extraordinarily gifted human being," writes Marcia Bore.

The object of all this adoration was born Aug. 2, 1924, in New York City. Carroll is a native of Leo, the Zodiac sign of actors; he therefore comes by his lion's roar quite honestly. Yet we suspect that behind the rough, robust image lurks a very quiet, gentle man.

O'Connor came from a solid, middle-class family of achievers. His father practised law; his mother was a teacher. They had three sons, two of whom graduated in medicine.

In his first solar horoscope house, which rules the outward appearance, we find the Sun (life force), plus Neptune (imagination), the Moon's lucky North Node, and Mercury (the mind). The first three are in princely, fiery Leo, while Mercury is at home in its own sign of Virgo. We speculate that his Moon is here also, in the literary ninth degree of Virgo. (He authored a movie script, now in production.)

His planet Mercury is caught in a cross fire from Mars (anger). "Like Archie, I can be very cranky," he told Arnold Hano. Clearly, the man has a slashing wit. We believe he can temper sarcasm with compassion, because his Mars is part of a Grand Trine aspect.

It was in college that he met Nancy Fields, whom he later married. They have one adopted son, Hugh. This adoption was blessed by the fact that Jupiter (which controls "luck") is in perfect harmony with Carroll's Sun. Jupiter is placed in his horoscope house of children.

The house placements are important, but the aspects between the planets tell the story. (Aspects are the angular relationships formed by the planets; for example, if two planets are "trine," this means they are 120 degrees apart.)

O'Connor has impulsive Mars and the unlucky South Node in his marriage house. Yet the hex is taken off by the Grand Trine which includes Mars (sex), Venus (love) and Saturn (destiny). The O'Connors recently celebrated their 20th anniversary.

This chart offers evidence that astrology really works.

When Saturn (hardships was adverse to Carroll's Sun, in 1954, the O'Connors had severe financial problems. When Pluto (Death) touched off his Mars-Mercury opposition, in 1961, Carroll learned that his brother Hugh had died in a motorcycle wreck. When his Sun progressed to the Zodiac degree of Ethel Barrymore's Sun, his acting career swept upward until it peaked with All in the Family.

Nude Scenes Don't Intrigue Veteran

Mature Still Uses All the 'Schticks'

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — That "gorgeous hunk of man" was having trouble with a line.

Seated in the mockup of the back seat of a limousine, Victor Mature kept stumbling over a phrase in the four pages of dialogue which had been rewritten 15 minutes before.

But all his scene-stealing tricks, the cocked eyebrow, the deftly timed double take, all the "schticks" the practiced actor can call upon to rivet audience eyes upon himself, were his to command.

It was impossible to say with exactness how well the famous Mature physique had resisted the assault of time, for Victor, playing a retired gangster in Every Little Crook and Nanny, was completely and in no way revealingly clothed. However, though the stomach may no longer be so flat, the waist so trim, nor the biceps so provocatively bulging, Mature still looked a fine figure of a man.

It was in the early '40s, when Mature was appearing on Broadway in a leopard skin, that a discerning critic called him a "gorgeous hunk of man."

Victor's vehicle at the time was Lady in the Dark with Gertrude Lawrence and Danny Kaye, and, though it didn't do a lot for his reputation as an actor, it did, thanks to one critical phrase, promote him as a male sex symbol.

Flacks at Hollywood studios which had him under contract wrote miles of copy about his muscles, while producers repeatedly decked him in costumes which let the muscles show.

In fact, when Victor wasn't playing a gangster, he was usually back in his leopard skin playing a caveman or Samson or in a mini-skirted toga playing a sexy Roman slave.

He was never, however, asked to play a nude scene until a week or so ago when the Every Crook and Nanny director hit him with the idea.

"Never in a million years," Victor said, though not in those words.

"There's not enough money in the world to get me to play a nude scene," he exploded. "I still have three cousins alive."

The star had finished his scene in the limousine mock-up by that time and was in his dressing room.

"I used to wear those cave-man costumes and togas and stuff because that was how people dressed at the time we were representing," Mature continued. "But I never would have played a nude scene at anytime in my career."

Since Mature was under studio contract for 25 years at salaries ranging from $5,000 to $35,000 a week, he's not hungry. He retired from the screen in 1960 to a luxurious home in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., from which he presides over various business enterprises.

Six years ago he came out of retirement long enough to make a movie in Rome, but otherwise he eschewed the sound stages until he was tempted back to MGM for his most recent picture.

"I don't know why a man in your situation bothers to come up here and work every day," someone in Mature's dressing room observed.

"I'm not going to bother any more," the star shot back. "I took this part because somebody sent me the script, and I read it and liked it. Yes, I'm of Italian descent, and I'm playing an Italian-American gangster, but I don't see anything wrong with that because I'm playing it strictly for comedy."

"This picture makes nine points, and each is attacked from the comedic standpoint. Nobody can think I'm insulting Italian-Americans or glorifying gangsters because of the stupid character I play. Some of his scenes should be ridiculously funny. This picture has a very funny script, and I can't wait until it's over."

Mature's father, Marcellus Mature, was an Italian born in Austria who immigrated to the United States in 1896 to become an itinerant knife sharpener. Embodying the American dream, he eventually became a prosperous distiller in Louisville, Ky., where his activeness was born.

"I was a tremendous disappointment to my parents," Mature said, peering out of his dressing room door to see how things were going on the set.

David Frost:
Emerging StarBy FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

A lot of American housewives know David Frost as a pleasant, dark-haired young man who smiles a lot and asks often-incisive questions of his guests on a television talk show.

But how many people know this British-born television personality played cricket well enough to have turned pro if he had wanted to and once shocked Britain by inviting the prime minister to breakfast?

This is the kind of entertaining, sometimes amusing if not earth-shattering information about David Frost laced generously through his biography, Will You Welcome Now... David Frost, by Willi Frischauer, a London journalist and author who has written more serious works about such scoundrels as Hermann Goering and Heinrich Himmler. He also has taken biographical aim at the Aga Khans and Aristotle Onassis.

The book is the story of how this ocean-hopping television personality guides his career between Britain and the United States, how he does his homework well so he is armed with "now" questions when he interviews such controversial figures as Israeli Premier Golda Meir and Vice President Spiro Agnew.

The son of an English minister, Frost was a popular television figure in Britain long before he brought his talents to the United States. A graduate of Cambridge University, he took his lumps for a time with the British Broadcasting Co. before success came. It was no overnight affair.

Limited Audience

This is a book which may absorb the millions who have watched and heard Frost interview the high, the mighty and the so-whats on television, but it isn't likely to enthrall others unless they like to read about show business in general, whether it's the stage, the motion picture or the tube. Even so, that leaves quite an audience.

Frost, writes Frischauer, has the knack of phrasing his next question while his guest is answering an earlier one to give his interviews a "spontaneous" image. He also innovated the idea of removing the desk from between him and his guests to create a more personal atmosphere.

At 32, David Frost already is engrossed not only in his on-camera career but in another as a producer, as well. Frischauer writes, "There is no saying how far he will go as a major figure of the television age," and the author could be right.
